Scripture of the Week
Freely you have received, freely give. Matthew 10:8

Are You Overstocking?

I read a folkstory about two brothers, one single and the other married with a large family. The single brother, looked at his crops, and said, "It's not fair for me to keep this overstocking to myself. My brother has so many children to feed. So, in the middle of the night, he slipped into his brother's barn, and filled it from his overstocking."

The married brother he also looked at his crops and said to himself, "It's not fair for me to keep this overstocking to myself. I have many children who will take care of me when I get old. My brother doesn't have any. So in the middle of the night he slipped into his brother's barn, and filled from his overstocking."

You can imagine the amazement on each brother's face in the morning when they found their barns as full as they were the day before. This stocking of each others barn went on night after night, until one night they met each other while they were about helping each other. Can't you just feel the love that they must have shared at that moment when they discovered how much love they had for one another as brothers?

In our lives we too, have had wonderful, family persons, caring friends, and sometimes strangers who "filled our barns" without counting the cost to themselves, nor expecting anything in return. Some of us give even when it seems foolish to those around us. A lot of us give in different ways; foster parents, adoptive parents, volunteers for service programs, visiting the sick, we give to others before we do for ourselves, we give our last dime, we give when we virtually have nothing to give.

We have learned to say I care about you and mean it, we have learned to go an extra mile, and we have also learned that family and friends are not just of flesh and blood, but of barns full of overstocking of love given without counting the cost. Let's remember to give and not expect nothing in return—now that's real overstocking!
