Disadvantaged Businesses To Participate In MAX Construction

In a related activity, Tri-Met joined forces with the City of Portland and Oregon Department of Transportation in establishing a workforce clearinghouse to encourage hiring of minorities and women on MAX and other public projects. Projected start-up for the $200,000, one-year pilot program is the end of March.

In the meantime, the NE Workforce Center is providing interim clearinghouse services to Tri-Met and has already contacted Morrison Knudsen to offer assistance with workforce recruitment. Contract documents provide a $2/hour rebate if the contractor registers as a training agent and hires qualified trainees.
