Black churches across the country hold special prayers, concerts and more than 19 different religious cauactivities today to mobilize support, awareness and compassion for African Americans affected by the AIDS epidemic. Organized by The Balm In Gilead, Inc. this campaign invites black churches nationwide to present a message about HIV/AIDS to their congregations, including a special prayer for family, friends and colleagues affected by HIV/AIDS.

Announcing their commitment to fight the AIDS epidemic, earlier this week African American religious leaders met at the White House with National AIDS Policy Coordinator, Kristine M. Gebbie, and signed a Declaration of War to fight HIV/AIDS.

"The response is remarkable, cuses have pledged to fight this epidemic and are actively reaching out to African Americans through the power of prayer," said Pernessa Seele, founder and chief executive officer, The Balm In Gilead, Inc.

"As religious leaders, we have a responsibility to responde with compassion, creativity and competence to the AIDS epidemic," said Bishop John Hurst Adams, Senior Bishop of the African American Methodist Episcopal Church. "We have a direct relationship to our members, their families and friends. We can make a real difference in reaching out to raise awareness about HIV/AIDS in our communities and what persons, orga- and women between 25-36. It is estinizations and institutions ought to

AIDS is taking a toll in the African American community. In less than a decade AIDS has quickly become the second leading cause of death among Africa American men mated that in 1994 one African American per hour will die of AIDS in the United States.

Highlighting this year's effort is "Gospel Cares" a concert organized by Nashville CARES and Broadway CARES/Equity Fights AIDS.
