VIKINGS REBUILDING

BY DANNY BELL

Portland State has been one the most dominant teams in womens volleyball for two decades. The Vikings have produced four national championships and 10 regional championships with 24 All-America awards divided among 10 athletes.

Presently 12-9 on the season and 5-1 in the Pacific West Conference, P.S.U. has been ranked in every Division II poll since its beginning (9 years).

Of the Vikings nine losses this year, eight have come to teams currently ranked in the top 10, and two have come at the hands of the number one ranked team. Currently the Vikings are ranked 12th in the nation.

Second year P.S.U. head coach Cathy Nelson has the tough job of maintaining the Viking impressive record and history of success. However she appears nonpluss about her first outing as a recruiter.

"We lost the core of our team following last season and those six seniors will be impossible to replace. But we have some young players returning, the freshmen who played last year, six redshirts who are very talented and what I feel is a great recruiting class, but I'm very optimistic about our future Nelson says.

"Our strength should be our power in the front row.

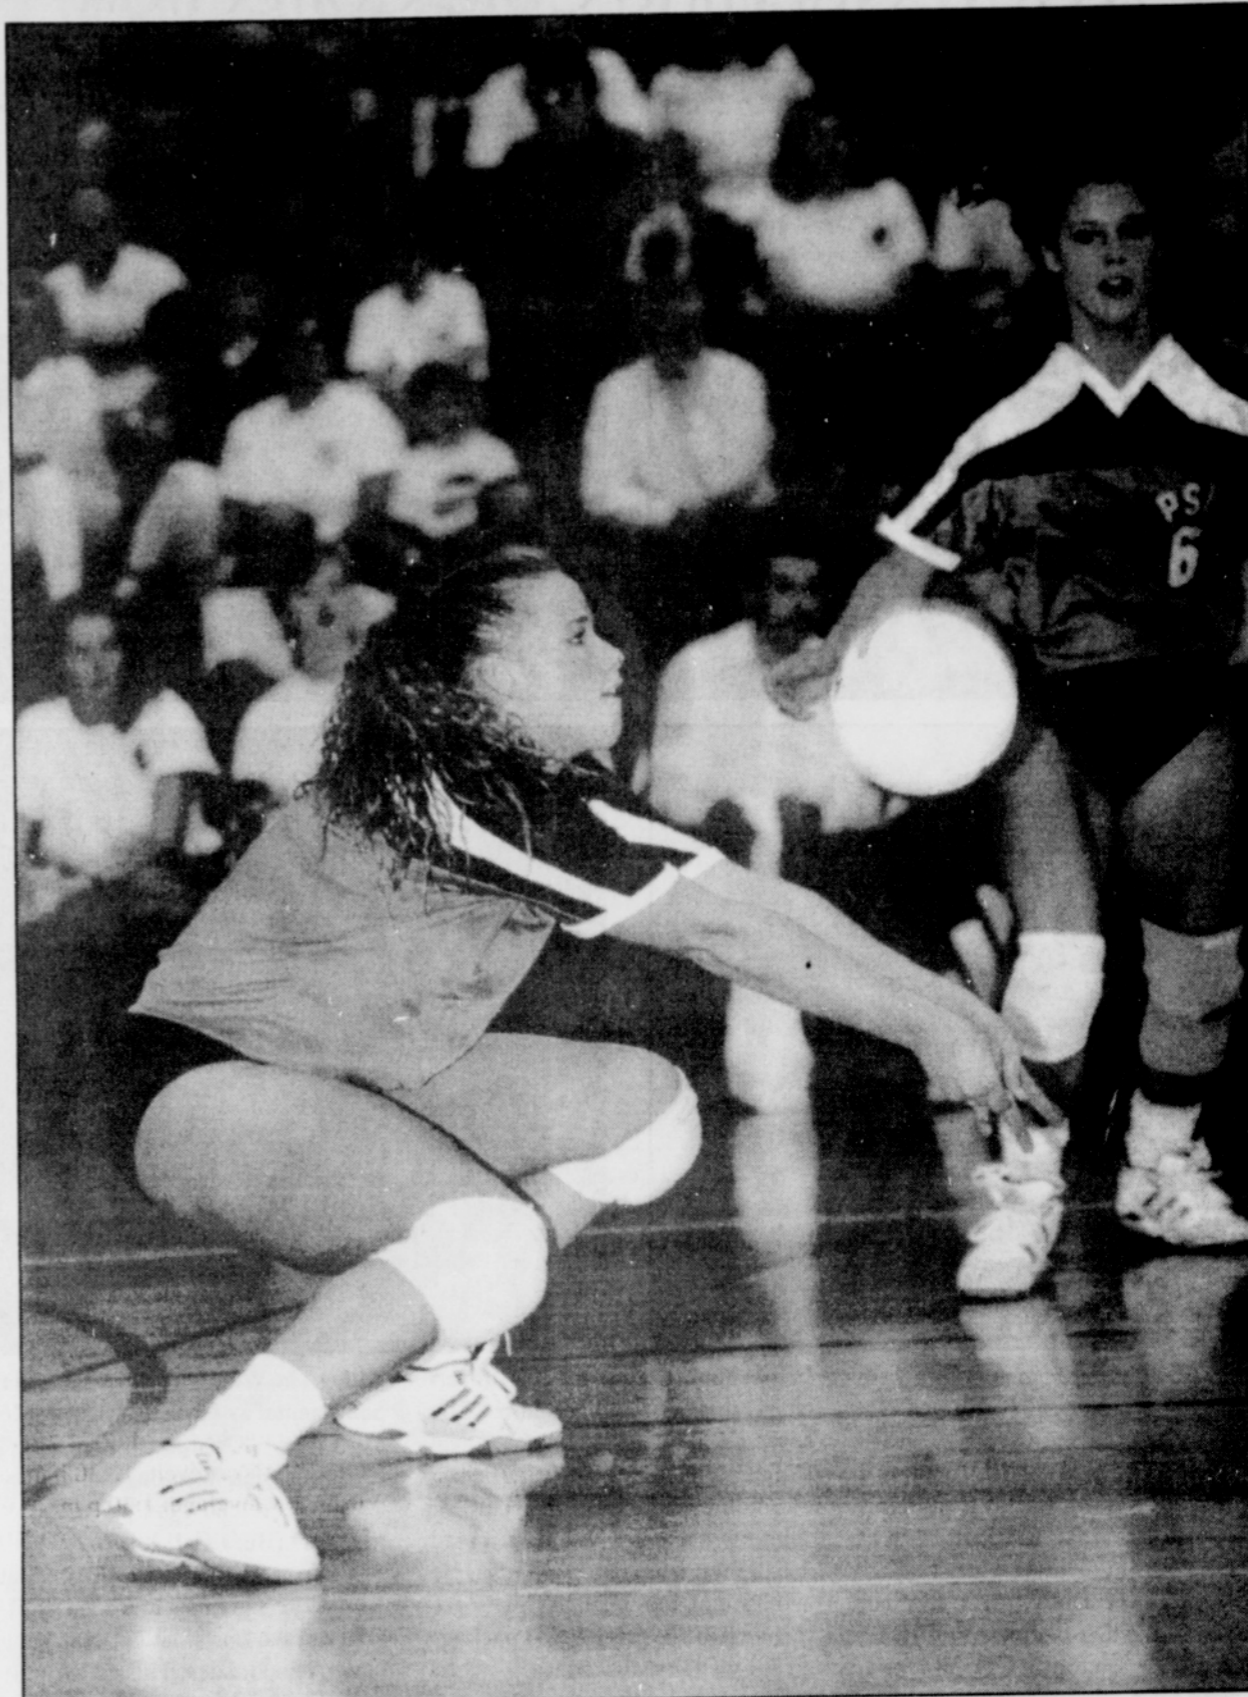

We're not going to be athletic as last year, but overall we will have more height, and should be an improved blocking team.

Nelson further states that "we're a fairly young team, with one senior, and a lot of people who haven't played in a while (red shirts and transfers) Nelson says" I expect it will take a while to get into a groove, and we may take our lumps early on. Especially with our difficult schedule, but by the end of the season, we should have progressed to the point to be a tough team to beat."

Two weeks ago the Vikings beat a pair Pacific West opponents beating Western New Mexico State 15-7, 15-12, 15-9 and Montana Billing State 15-9, 15-7, 15-10. Last Thursday P.S.U. defeated the tough Seattle Pacific team.

After two decades of prominence in Division II P.S.U. is not about to abandon their pursuit of excellence even in a rebuilding year.
