HARLEM GLOBETROTTERS TOUR SOUTH AMERICAN

The Harlem Globetrotters continued their successful month-long tour of South America this weekend drawing over 40,000 fans to four sold out shows in Sao Paulo, Brazil. The Globetrotters have drawn over 110,000 fans to their games since this tour began in Bucaramanga, Columbia on June 5.

The team had to turn away as many as 2,000 people at each of the shows in Sao Paulo. Fans inside the arena witnessed exciting Globetrotter basketball where in one game Globetrotter rookie center Glover Jackson had a literal rim-shattering slam dunk where his head and arms soared above the rim and then he broke the backboard. This dunk caused an injury to him requiring 13 stitches to his right shoulder. At the end of the game the next day, guard Barry "High Rise" Hardy shattered a second backboard with a high-flying, mystifying dunk. Hardy was not injured, however, the standing room only crowd of nearly 12,000 lingered in the arena for nearly 45 minutes after the game had ended.

"The fans in Columbia, Mexico and Brazil have been very receptive to Globetrotter basketball," Harlem Globetrotters owner and chairman Mannie Jackson said who attended the games in Sao Paulo. "They experienced the true essence of our new game which is a new generation of talented athletes and superior family entertainment. With the overwhelming response we have had from the people there, we are currently making plans to return this Fall and next Spring."

The Harlem Globetrotters were asked to extend the tour four games but the team concluded this current tour in Rio De Janeiro on Sunday, July 2, before more than 20,000 fans.

The Harlem Globetrotters are the most popular family entertainment show in the world as they have performed for over 100 million people in 113 countries in the past 69 years.

SEI SUMMER CAMP

Self Enhancement Summer Camp students pause for special ceremonies as Tony Hopson, president of the organization, receives a $15,000 Ronald McDonald Children's Charities grant from Sal Muscardin, owner of the downtown McDonald's at 9th and Alder. Muscardin told the group he was rooting for their success. "I started as a French fry cook at McDonalds and now own a store. I'm sure you will do even better," he said.

THE U.S. SUPREME COURT RULING ON STUDENT ATHLETE DRUG TESTING

It will not be long before a typical day at school for millions of middle and high school kids will involve being herded to the bathrooms and forced to urinate in front of someone they probably don't even know. They are to be tested that day for illegal drugs. The highest court in the land has made it perfectly clear - at least six of the most honorable justices have. Go to school and you can be tested for illegal drugs; at any time and for no other reason than the luck of the draw.

The inevitable outcome for many young people who do have a drug abuse problem? They will stay away from school. Away from the "guardian and tutor of children" as Justice Scalia waxed so eloquently. Away from those who could help - if only they could be trusted - into the arms of those who exploit. Again we are fighting a public health disaster with cops, judges, and total intolerance. It just keeps getting worse.

Human folly aside for the moment. I'd like to thank Scalia and his five other hypocritical and hysteric chums for just giving the anti-prohibition movement thousands, perhaps millions, of young and energetic activists. They will not be kids forever, they will not suffer this indignity without protest. Those of us who work in the movement may well look back upon this day, and view it as a watershed of support for the eradication of drug policies that simply do more harm than good.

KILTED CELEBRITIES TOSS KEGS FOR CHARITY

Portland area celebrities and on-air personalities Joe Becker, Steve Barlestein, Paul Linnman and Anne Schatz (wearing kilts, no less) will vie to see who can throw and empty keg the furthest on Thursday, July 13, at 1 p.m. at Portland Brewing Company, 2730 NW 31st Avenue. The event will help kick off the Portland Scottish Highland Games, and Portland Brewing will donate $500 to the winners favorite charity.

"Mac" MacTarnahan, Portland Brewing's president Ale Meritus, will be on hand to judge the competition. Jim McGoldrick, a participant in the Portland Highland games, will coach the participants on proper form and technique.

"It occurred to us that one of the missing events at the Scottish Highland Games is a celebrity keg toss, and we've rushed to fill the void," said Tony Adams, Portland Brewing President and CEO. "And if Liam Neeson and Mel Gibson can wear kilts, well, so can the participants in this event."

The public is welcome to attend the event.

The 43rd Annual Portland Scottish Highland Games will take place on Saturday, July 15 from 9 a.m.-9 p.m. at Mt Hood Community College.

Portland Brewing Company, located at 2730 NW 31st Avenue in Portland, was formed in 1983 to produce handcrafted ales for the Portland beer market. Today, Portland Brewing Company brews and bottles MacTarnahan's Ale, Oregon Honey Beer, Wheat Berry Brew and Portland Ale as well as a variety of tap specialty and seasonal beers for distribution throughout the Western states.

Kidsational Summer Sundays

The Square's new series will please kids of all ages.

Summer Sundays will have a whole new appeal for parents who are looking for something new, exciting and different to do with the kids. Kidsational Summer Sundays is a new summer series produced by Pioneer Courthouse Square. Kidsational Summer Sundays will offer interactive, educational, informational yet fun programs for children to enjoy with their parents.

Generously sponsored by Portland Putt, Kidsational Summer Sundays kicked off on Sunday, July 9th with Science and Nature Day. OMSI took over The Square from noon until 5:00 PM with overwhelming science & nature displays.

For the kinder and gentler audiences, Macaw Landing Foundation featured some of nature's most beautiful, colorful and intelligent animals - macaws.

The Square's second Kidsational Summer Sunday will be Heritage Day on Sunday, July 30 from noon until 5:00 PM.

The Oregon Historical Society will be teaching children how to pan for gold, how to wash clothes with an old fashioned wash board, and how to make yarn dolls. Entertainment will be provided by the OHS's Folk Arts folks and the Portland Storytellers Guild.

Kidsational Summer Sundays 1995 will continue on August 13th and 20th (Sundays, of course) with Health and Athletics Day and Art Day. Artquake will feature a special Monday edition of Kidsational Summer Sundays as part of its festivities on The Square on Labor Day.

As with all Square events, Kidsational Summer Sundays is free and open to the public.
