

Lawrence J. Dark President and CEO of Urban League

"I think more concrete tangible things would get at this whole issue. And for me, both issues would be economic power, access to capital, real opportunities for employment and that we also make sure that policies that are implemented at the Federal, State and local level do not have a negative impact on African Americans, people of color and low income people. We need policies, practices that allow people to have economic self-reliance, free of all discrimination to be full citizens in this country."

...as well as white men, would be guaranteed the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note insofar as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given the Negro people a bad check; a check which has come back marked "insufficient funds." We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. And so we've come to cash this check, a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice.

We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the...

"Dream  Speech"

In 1963, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. led a March on Washington. The people's signs read "For Jobs and Freedom."

Hugh B. Price

In 1997, Hugh Price urged America to finish the job Dr. King started.

"Economic power is the next civil rights frontier," Hugh Price told delegates at the National Urban League's 1997 conference. "Our struggle remains to give African Americans the opportunity to be developers and owners and establish ourselves as an economically-powerful group."

As president of the National Urban League, Mr. Price is focusing the civil rights organization on economic empowerment and development of our children. In Portland, the Urban League offers assistance to help students and job seekers reach their full potential.

On March 12, 1998, Hugh Price will speak on "Economic Power" at the Urban League of Portland's Equal Opportunity Dinner. For information, call (503) 280-2600.

HAVE YOU NOTICED HOW IMPERSONAL BANKING HAS BECOME?

There's a point where banking automation ceases to be for your convenience, and only benefits, well, the bank. But at Pacific One, we've never lost sight of the simple fact that banking is a service industry, and, to put it simply, you can't get service from a machine.

That's why we get to know you and your banking needs, not by guessing, but from actually talking with you. From our tellers to our branch managers, you'll find the kind of service you'd expect from a small bank. But we're backed by over $900 million in assets, so we have the resources to do more than just talk about your needs. We can fulfill them.

Now don't get us wrong, it's not like we do loan calculations on an abacus. We have all the modern banking technology: PC banking, bank-by-phone and ATMs. But they're in addition to, not instead of, real banking service. You see, no matter what kind of technological marvels the future of banking may hold, machines will never replace people. Well, at least not at Pacific One. Can a bank really do that? Yes, it can.

At Pacific One, we have all the modern banking conveniences, but they're not in place of people.
