Jamie Foxx

When it comes to entertainment, there are few challenges that Jamie Foxx will back away from. Whether it's starring in his own successful sitcom, playing a leading man on the big screen, consistently selling out venues on his stand-up "Unleashed" tour or recording top 20 albums, Jamie Foxx is on the fast track to super stardom.

In its second season, "The Jamie Foxx Show" is one of the highest rated programs on the WEB network (Sunday @ 8:00 PM). Foxx portrays Jamie King, a young man who comes to Hollywood seeking the elusive "big time." In the meantime, though, King works at his aunt's aging hotel in order to pay the rent and to take advantage of the hotel's cocktail lounge, where his character hones his skills as an entertainer. but with his positive attitude and endearing perseverance, the question isn't if he'll make it, but when? Foxx not only stars in the hilarious sitcom, but is the co-creator and producer.

Jamie was no stranger to television audiences before launching his own series. For three years, he co-starred with Jim Carey, Damon Wayans and Tommy Davidson on the hit FOX series, "In Living Color." Foxx's characters were amongst the most popular on the show, including his brilliant portrayal of Wanda, who was always ready to "...rock your world." Foxx also had a recurring role on the critically-acclaimed FOX show, "Roc," in which he played Crazy George.

Already an established television star, his movie career is beginning to blossom as well. Next spring, Jamie will be featured in Ice Cube's directorial debut, "The Player's Club," from New Line Cinema. Most recently, Jamie starred with Tommy Davidson and Vivica A. Fox in Sony's "Booty Call," a "hilarious and irresistible (movie and the) year's first fall-down, bust-a-gut laughing comedy," according to CBS Radio. Daily Variety called Foxx "...a charismatic lead." The Hollywood Reporter added, "Foxx is perfect..." and the New York Times concluded that, "The movie (was) custom made for Mr. Foxx."

Currently, Jamie is performing his "Unleashed" tour across the U.S., which will take him to over 30 cities. He is especially looking forward to March 7th when he appears in New York and March 27th when he performs at the Universal Amphitheater in Los Angeles. The tour follows the tremendous success of his first HBO special, "Straight From the Foxxhole."
