THE WEEK IN REVIEW

Bombing in Kenya

Two U.S. embassies were bombed in Kenya and Tanzania, killing at least 67 people and injuring over 1,100. More than 60 people were killed in Nairobi and 7 killed in Tanzania. The Islamic Jihad made known their intentions of targeting American interests.

Massive Floods

Massive floods ravaged central China that affected one-quarter of China's population. The floods destroyed billions of dollars in real estate and farmland. The death toll is about 2,500.

Grand Jury

Monica Lewinsky spent 8 1/2 hours in the federal courthouse before the grand jury to give her account of the sexual relationship she developed with President Clinton. Lewinsky may be recalled after Clinton gives his testimony as well. The President is scheduled to testify on August 17th.

AIDS vaccine

A vaccine that could prevent infection from the AIDS virus will be nationally tested. Women in relationships with HIV positive men and homosexual men will be recruited for the research study. An earlier study showed that the vaccine boosted the immune system.

Grant High School

Celia Nive Reynolds of Grant High School told the police that she drove Thomas Curtis and Ethan Throver to a market and got a share of the robbery money. She was charged with two counts of first-degree robbery and two counts of second-degree robbery. Her bail was set at $1 million.

Reducing Gun Violence

Five mayors from Philadelphia, Little Rock, Gary, Portland and St. Louis met at a conference to work on legislative proposals to reduce gun violence. They teamed up with firearms manufacturers as well to block the "straw purchase" of guns, for criminals and youths.

World Masters Games

The opening event of the Nike World Master Games was held at the Civic Stadium where 11,000 athletes were represented. The World Masters games are an Olympics-style event with no qualifying standards for athletes ages 25 and older.

Academic Testing

Oregon will become the first state in the nation to give different standardized tests to kids that are in the same grade. This will help determine a student's academic level. Test experts question the benchmark range of the differentiated tests to accurately gauge scholastic achievement.

Tiger Woods To Teach Inner-City Kids In Portland

Heron Lakes golf Course, Monday, August 17
Third Stop on 1998 Golf Clinic Tour

Tiger Woods will teach inner-city Portland kids the skills of golf and life at his third junior golf clinic of the year, the director of his foundation's golf program announced today.

Some 2,500 children selected from grass-roots organizations will participate by invitation in the Tiger Woods Junior Golf Clinic and Exhibition at the Heron Lakes Golf Course near Hayden Island on Monday, August 17, 1998.

Tiger Woods will give a hands on lesson to 25 kids selected from the community. A diverse group of golf instructors will teach an additional 100.

Following the teaching session, Woods will lead a golf exhibition of the group of approximately 3,000, consisting of children and their chaperones from Portland schools, parks and recreation groups, and other community organizations. He will speak about his experiences, answer children's questions, and give a hitting demonstration. Earl Woods will speak to the children, parents and chaperones about the importance of parenting.

The Foundation conducts weekend golf clinics in metropolitan areas throughout the U.S. where it sees it can positively impact the lives of young children and their families," said Joe Grant, executive director of the Tiger Woods Foundation. "Through a weekend filled with activities, Tiger motivates children to reach their dreams by teaching them one of his; and Earl shares his parenting experiences to encourage adults to put children first in their lives so they can help them reach their dreams."

The Foundation's search for young golfers to participate in both the clinic and exhibition centered on inner-city neighborhoods and community organizations, which help underprivileged kids. "When Tiger was young, a lot of pros took time out to help him. He and his family have always been grateful for this. Through the Foundation, the Woods family is able to help today's young golfers who are responsible, enthusiastic and deserving of a chance," said Greg Marshall, director of junior golf programs for the Tiger Woods Foundation. "There's nothing quite like seeing the excitement on the face of a young golfer who is being instructed by Tiger."

The junior golf clinic and exhibition is part of a series of events sponsored by the Tiger Woods Foundation. The series includes:

*A series of FREE workshops aimed at inner-city families. The workshops provide information on the game of golf and opportunities made possible by the game. The workshops will be held at Self Enhancement, Inc. on Saturday, August 15 from 9 am-1 pm. Space is still available and interested individuals can register by calling Stacy Stark at 714-816-1806.

Tiger Woods

will be held at Pumpkin Ridge Golf Course near Hillsboro on Monday, August 17 at 8 pm.

*An informal, public parenting seminar led by Woods' father, Earl, best-selling author of Training a Tiger: A Father's Guide to Raising a Winner in Both Golf and Life. This session will be held at Mt. Olivet Baptist Church on Tuesday, August 18 at 6:30 pm.

These events are open to participants by invitation only. Portland Parks and Recreation is the official sponsor of the junior golf clinic and exhibition at Portland Parks' Heron Lakes Golf Course on Monday, August 17.

The Tiger Woods Foundation, founded by the Woods family in December 1996, recognizes the family as the most important unit in society.

Williams-Vancouver to be bikeway

The Portland City Council last week approved a new bike route, and related traffic improvements, on North Williams and Vancouver Avenue.

The 3.6 mile route will run from North Broadway to Lombard Street, planner Jeff Smith told Council. For part of the way, along North Williams North of Killingsworth Street, there will simply be signs pointing to the route, with no separate bike lane. In other areas, such as parts of Vancouver between Fremont and Alberta, and between Morris and Fargo, one of the two traffic lanes will be eliminated to make room for the bike lane. For the most part, the city was able to avoid removing parking, the source of friction on many bike lane projects, Smith said. Only 55 spaces were eliminated, he said.

Possibly for that reason, the Eliot, Boise and Humboldt neighborhood associations endorsed the project, while a fourth, Piedmont, remained neutral on it. Ron Kiernan of the city Bicycle Advisory Committee called the project "one of the easiest ever. There will be tougher ones coming." It is also one of the first bike routes running north and south, he said, and as such is important in creating a bike route network.

Humboldt tied its support to city assistance in moving a traffic diverter from North Jessup Street south to Killingsworth Street. Currently through auto traffic is routed to Vancouver at Jessup. This places heavy traffic on several blocks of Williams that Humboldt feels should be a local street, representative Darr Crummon said.

Steve Rogers of Eliot called for improvements to the North Cook and Vancouver Avenue intersection, one of the city's most common locations for serious accidents.

The city considered putting bike paths on Northeast Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard, Smith said, but found there was not enough room to accommodate bike, traffic and parking lanes on the street. "It became clear the obstacles were pretty much insurmountable," he said.
