College Courses Come to Local Microbreweries

Give microbrews the old college try at Portland Community College's Tap into Microbrews! course. Designed for those with an interest in the Northwest handcrafted beer craze, this series of classes allows individuals to learn the fine art of brewing by some of the industry's greatest brewmasters.

Fall term classes will take place at five different microbreweries and will explore the many different facets of the brewing process.

Topics range from history to open fermentation to the dissection of beer. Each class includes a 1-1/2 hour talk by a brewmaster or brewery representative, followed by a half-hour tasting session.

Cost for registration is $10 per course and students must provide their own transportation to the breweries.

Although there are five classes in all, each course can be registered for individually. Space is limited. To register, individuals should call 503-614-7308.

The Fall term schedule begins September 26 at BridgePort Brewing Company, located at 1313 NW Marshall in Portland; and continues October 3 at Peak Northwest, located at 5691 SE International Way in Milwaukie; October 10 at Full Sail Brewing Company, located at 0307 SW Montgomery in Portland; October 17 at Mt. Angel Brewing company at 210 Monroe Street in Mt. Angel; and finishes up November 7 at BJ's Brewpub, located at 12105 N. Center in Portland. All classes last from 2-4 pm.

The course continues with new breweries and topics each quarter, and students who complete 12 classes (24 hours) receive a certificate acknowledging them as a "Connoisseur of the Microbrew Culture."

For a complete class description or more information, contact PCC's Community Education Office at 503-614-7308.
