

Steve Martin plays an aspiring movie producer and Eddie Murphy is an eager nerd.

BOWFINGER

Bobby Bowfinger (Steve Martin), a nearly bankrupt aspiring movie producer-director, is about to take one last shot at fame and fortune. Desperate to hit the big time, the hapless dreamer recruits a motley crew of aspiring misfits, including an eager nerd, an ambitious ingenue and an over-the-hill diva. With their help, Bowfinger embarks on a radical, ingenious scheme to trick the biggest name in movies (Eddie Murphy) into becoming the star of his ultra-low budget film.

Murphy plays Kit Ramsey, an A-list Hollywood action star equipped with all the quintessential trappings: ego, entourage, wealth and paranoia. He also portrays Kit's soft-spoken, well-meaning and somewhat dim-witted brother, Jiff. Kit is the central figure in a movie he doesn't know he's in. Murphy elaborates, "People in bad outfits, spewing crazy dialogue, come out of nowhere and accost him. Not knowing they're actors, you can see why he might lose his mind. It's a very funny premise."

Monica Visits the Rose City

Concert Review
by Tony Washington

Young entertainers are in abundance these days and Monica is one of the most talented. She had visited the Rose City on the "All That" tour, August 6. Her crisp, clear sounding voice put the freeze on the crowd, giving an indication of how musically gifted she really is. Many rose to their feet and applauded for minutes on end after she sang a variety of her previous and current releases.

Young listeners got the chance to see the gifted singer in her early prime. She closed the performance with "Angel of Mine" that revealed a maturation of her talent. Monica is truly a stage wonder to behold!
