THE WEEK IN REVIEW

Turkey Quake

A quake, measured at 7.8 in western Turkey left 1,000 people dead and thousands injured. Some ran into the street in panic, others were crushed in the rubble. Dozens of buildings and highway overpasses were left in ruin. Authorities estimated that 156 people were killed in Istanbul alone.

Russia's New Prime Minister

The Russian Parliament recently approved Boris Yeltsin's choice of Vladimir Putin as Russia's new prime minister. Putin was a former KGB agent and national security chief before being placed as the country's fourth prime minister in 17 months. Prime minister Putin promised to strengthen social policies and to help the poor.

L.A. Murder

Buford O. Furrow, the white supremacist arrested in a bloody attack on a Jewish community center was charged with murder and multiple counts of attempted murder. Furrow was also charged for murdering postal worker Joseph Santos Iletto. Iletto was shot shortly after the North Valley Jewish Community Center was attacked.

Columbine High School

Columbine High students returned to class for the first time since two classmates went on a deadly shooting spree four months ago. The school's principal had raised flags half-staff on the school grounds since the April 20 shooting by Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold that left 1 person, including the shooters, dead.

Glaucoma Blindness Blocked

Research scientists have discovered a way to treat glaucoma by blocking a chemical that may slow, if not prevent, blindness. The new approach reduces levels of an enzyme that fosters excessive production of a chemical called nitric oxide. The excessive levels seem to damage optic nerve cells.

Women's Prison

While Governor John Kitzhaber is about to sign a bill making an area on Day Road in Wilsonville the newest women's prison, many residents are opposed to the idea. It's been a lengthy debate for more than two years. Those not wanting the prison in Wilsonville have three weeks to file a lawsuit to stop the governor from signing the bill.

National Barbecue Competition Relocates to Waterfront

Celebrating Fifth Year of Benefiting Oregon Food Bank

1999 Safeway Bones & Brew Moves To Tom McCall Waterfront Park

To celebrate its fifth year of raising funds for the Oregon Food Bank, 1999 Safeway Bones & Brew National Invitational Barbecue Cookoff is beefing up and moving to Portland's Tom McCall Waterfront Park. In addition to growing bigger, 1999 Safeway Bones & Brew is pleased to announce that for the first time ever it has a title sponsor - Safeway. The event becomes better with new music and entertainment, including a variety of country, jazz, and rock musicians, as well as three new cooking teams. Safeway Bones & Brew runs September 10, 11, and 12.

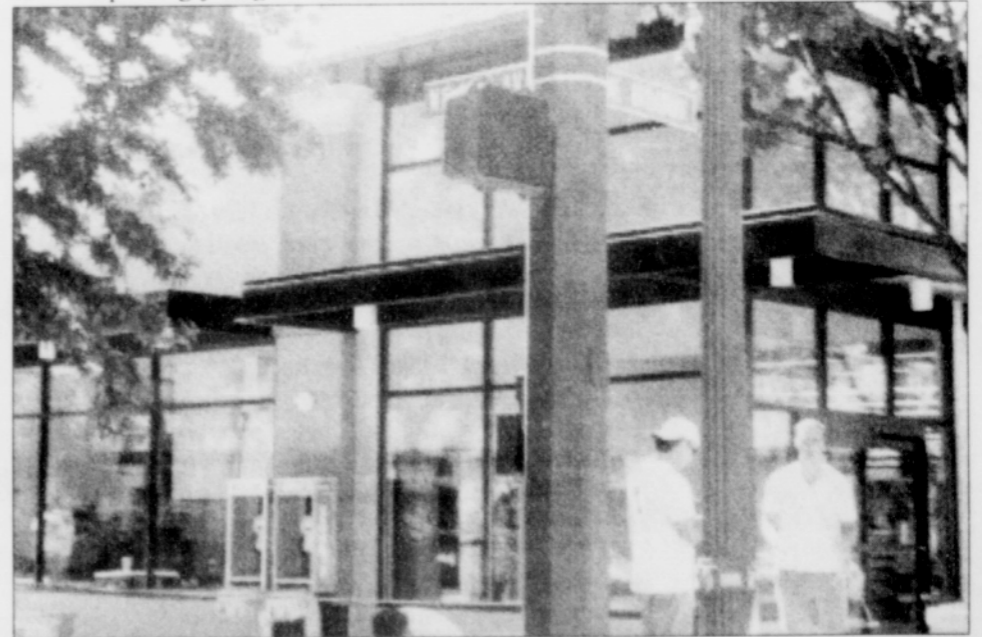

Due to the events' popularity, Safeway Bones & Brew has moved to Tom McCall Waterfront from its past venue, Holladay Park. Tom McCall Waterfront Park, spanning from the Morrison Bridge to Salmon Springs Fountain, is reserved each day of the ribs n' brisket extravaganza. For the days, the aroma of the cookers' secret sauce covering ribs sizzling over coals will engulf Portland's Waterfront Park. Safeway Bones & Brew sponsors: BridgePort Brewing Company and Henry Weinhard's Private Reserve - new will provide thirst-quenching brews this year.

Event patrons will help the hungry by attending Safeway Bones & Brew. Proceeds benefit the Oregon Food Bank. The local organization collects and distributes food to more than 600 state agencies helping to feed the hungry each year. Oregon has a surpassingly large hunger problem and Oregon Food Bank needs all of the help it can get to meet rising levels of starvation. During the past five years, Safeway Bones & Brew has become a critical contribution for Oregon Food Bank, and this year expects to raise much more.

Eleven of the nation's best barbecues will come together at Portland's Waterfront Park, all hoping to grab the title of "Best Beef Brisket and Best Ribs" in the Pacific Northwest. These eleven will barbecue, smoke, and prepare for an expert and panel of judges, plus serve and sell heaping plates of ribs, beef brisket, corn on the cob, and other barbecue favorites to event patrons. Judges will rank cookers' pork and beef brisket entries based on several categories, including taste, texture, appearance, and flavor.

A barbecue would not be the same without music! New this year at Safeway Bones & Brew, a variety of renowned blues, country, jazz, and rock musicians will light up Waterfront Park with their own blend of musical celebration. Blues musicians Paul deLay, Jesse Samuel, K.G. Jackson and Shakin' Grand, and Terry Evans, will bring a blend of blues hits melodies new to Safeway Bones & Brew. Bringing a repertoire of jazz songs to Safeway Bones & Brew this year, Mary Kadderly and her band will perform on Sunday afternoon. Newcomer rock band McKinley will give Saturday evening barbecues a chance to rock to the beat while they enjoy their ribs n' brew.

Workers get the new Safeway ready to open at its new location, near Lloyd Center. The grand opening was Tuesday, August 17th right.
