Safety in the Nail Salon

alleging violations of sanitation standards.

The office has also developed two brochures to educate the public about salon safety, one for consumers and one for nail technicians.

If you are seeking out a particular salon based on a very low price, or 'discount' price compared to other salons, buyer beware.

Professional cosmetologists need to charge a rate that reflects their cost of doing business, which includes necessary supplies, disposable tools and sanitation equipment. A quick product survey by the Health Licensing Office indicates that at low-end minimum, a nail technician uses at least $2 worth of disposable products on a single client during one session, based on June 2001 market prices.

Use common sense: If you are paying not much more than that product consumption figure for a nail service, chances are that shortcuts are being taken, and products intended for disposal following use on a client might be re-used.

Demand that the technician use a clean instrument if there is any question in your mind about whether the instrument is used or unclean.

All nail services must be performed in a state-licensed facility with state-licensed practitioners.

Look for a clean work area. The salon and workstations should be clean and free of debris and dirt. Instruments that can be disinfected should be washed and disinfected after each use, and a new set of unused disposable files should be used on each client.

Look for an organized work area. Clean towels and a container of Environmental Protection Agency-registered, hospital-grade disinfectant (for storing metal tools) should be on every nail technician's table.

Instruments and supplies that cannot be disinfected, such as orange sticks and the sponges placed between the toes, should be thrown away immediately after initial use.

If you have questions about enforcement of state regulations, or to request the brochure 'What to Look For in a Nail Salon,' contact the Health Licensing Office Enforcement Section at 503-378-8667 extension 4310 or by e-mail to hlo.info@state.or.us

Festival Latino Celebrates Cultures

On Saturday, Sept. 8, bring the whole family to beautiful Cathedral Park under the St. Johns Bridge to enjoy an afternoon of Latino music, art, culture, and food. From 1 p.m. until dusk, there will be music and dance from Mexico to Brazil, with booths and activities for all ages, including children and teens.

Festival Latino, now in its fourth year, has expanded to present international artists, including the first-ever appearance in Portland of Brazilian dancer Tania Santiago with master musicians, Jorge Alabe and the Lions of Batucada.

Mariachi music, Mexican traditional dance, storytelling, and Paraguayan harp are just a few of the features of this diverse afternoon, produced by Portland Parks and Recreation in cooperation with several neighborhood groups and sponsors.

Traditional Latino foods will be on sale in the park.
