Reading at Metro Assembly of God

What do a great-great-grandmother, a mom and an auntie have in common? They all participated in a mentoring "Reading Works" class.

An open house will begin another class term on Nov. 5 at the Portland Metro Assembly of God Church on Northeast 6th and Alberta. The class will meet twice a week for 18 weeks.

Reading Works helps student of any age to learn to read or to read better. It costs $3.50 per session, but if a parent or significant adult participates with the student, the cost is reduced.

Teacher Katy Libke with her helper Connie Meyer teach the class and train the attending adults to assist.

"It helped me with my sounds and how to pronounce the words, so I don't have to keep on guessing," one of the students commented.

The instruction blends a sound and sight method with a method called Spaulding. The instruction help students acquire the skills for recognizing sounds formed by various letter combinations, called phonograms.

The program has proven effective in giving students the foundation they need to improve reading and word recognition skills—whether child, youth, or adult.

The program was founded by well qualified leaders. Libke is a substitute teacher in the Portland Public Schools and has a Master of Science degree in Education. Meyer is a skilled reading tutor previously employed by Multnomah County for teaching adults.

"Keeping it Fresh" is also being offered this fall. It is a follow-up course to strengthen skills learned in the Reading Works class with a review of past material and as well as further development of skills.

If you're a great-grandmother, an aunt or an uncle, a youth or a young student, there's a place for you in this program—as a learner or as a helper!

Call Libke at 503-281-8121 for more information, to sign up for a course or to help out with the classes financially or in person.

Concert in the Chapel Features Youth Choir

The Oregon Children's Choir and Youth Chorale will present the second in the 2001-2002 series of Concerts in the Chapel at Warner Pacific College, Sunday, Oct. 28 at 3 p.m.

Secular and sacred songs will be featured and will be presented in McGuire Auditorium on the campus.

Founded in 1994 by Sandra Miller as the Lake Oswego Children's Choir, the ensemble grew from 32 children to three choirs: the Preparatory Choir of 40 members, the Children's Choir of 65 members, and the Youth Chorale with 30 singers.

Concert prices are $8, $6 for students and seniors, with family admission for $15. The College is located at Southeast 68th and Division.

Tickets and further information may be obtained from Dr. Walter Saul, Director, Concerts in the Chapel, 503-517-1061.
