A little girl bruised by debris from last month's Colima, Mexico earthquake stands among the ruins of her former home.

A Portland photographer captured this picture of a collapsed wall and other debris that littered a neighborhood of Colima, Mexico just a few days after a 7.8 magnitude quake shook the city.

Colima Quake Documented

Portland photographer surveys damage of Mexican quake at shelters and in Colima neighborhoods, estimated that 60 to 70 people died, with more people missing.

Yandell said he saw hundreds of adobe houses completely demolished, and saw churches with huge structural cracks.

Yandell is a Radio Cab driver from Portland who frequently comes to the aid of Portland's disadvantaged. Each year he helps hundreds of local residents during campaigns to donate turkeys to the needy for the holidays. He also collects and delivers school supplies and bicycles for deserving kids.

During his visit to Mexico, he helped quake victims carry bricks away from demolished homes and bought sodas for victims.

'Our Town' at the Portland International Film Fest

Thorton Wilder goes to Compton in this inspired look at the survival of the arts in the heart of the ghetto. With no budget, no stage and a ton of ambition, two teachers and 24 students set forth to execute the first theater production attempted at Manuel Dominguez High School in more than 20 years and to demonstrate that there's more to their school than riots and basketball. Directed by Scott Hamilton Kennedy, 'Our Town' closely follows these students through their empowering and conflict ridden rehearsals and into their homes and hearts. The movie will show at the Broadway Metroplex, 1000 S.W. Broadway, on Wednesday, Feb. 25 at 6:45 p.m.

Conscripts

On Thursday, Feb. 27 at Disjecta, 116 N.E. Russell, there will be a performance of 'Conscripts,' a work for voices and large ensembles with words by John Crouse and music directed by Stanley Zappa. The ensemble consists of a six-person percussion section, three saxophones, one trumpet, one vibraphone, one acoustic bass and four readers. The music is improvised. Doors will open at 8 p.m. and all ages' admission is $5. For more information, call 503-331-0136.

The production contains mature subject matter that may not be suitable for younger audience members. Tickets are $8 for general admission and $5 for students and seniors. Cho 'Revolution Tour'

With the same unbridled, no holds-barred humor that has made her famous, Margaret Cho will tackle the axis of evil, her travels through Thailand's red light district, the explosion of child birth, bartering sex for household chores, revolutionizing your self-esteem, the joy of bodily functions, her looser ex-boyfriend, and of course, her world-famous mother and much more that cannot be printed. Cho will perform in Portland on Thursday, March 13 at the Arlene Schnitzer Concert Hall.
