

CHARITY GAME SUPPORTS SCHOLARSHIPS

The 2003 Portland Observer Cory Cougar Basketball team included Lavon Van, Lenord Latin, Durray Thirgill, Canaan Chapman, Fred Boogan, Keith Woods, Maurice France and Mark Washington. The team squared off against the Jammin 95.5 Nike Big Ballers to raise money for the Joyce Washington Scholarship Fund, which awards scholarships to local high school students with interests in social service or journalism.

Portland High Steppers Breshay Barney and Shardea Booth, both 8-years-old, show off their dance moves during half time.

Former Portland Trail Blazer Michael Harper Sr., with his son, Michael Jr., served as master of ceremonies for the Portland Observer Cory Washington Memorial Charity Basketball game.

Jammin 95
beats Portland
Observer's
Cory Cougars,
81-76

'Tease' dance group members Aisha Dansby, Adore Butcher, Tasha Morris, Ebona Moore, Eliza McCay and Shay Washington step it up for the Cory Washington Memorial Charity Basketball game. The girls are all students at Boumount and Fernwood middle schools.

The Portland High Steppers perform a routine for the crowd at the Self Enhancement Inc. gymnasium on Saturday. Dance coaches Dana Ingram and Aitash Muhammed founded the drill and dance team for inner city girls to create confidence and foster creativity for local youth. They perform in area parades and before Little League games.