Stoudamire Busted

Trail Blazers president Steve Patterson said the team is working with union representatives to get Stoudamire into a drug rehabilitation program. Patterson said the arrest has again compromised an image the team is trying to rebuild after Stoudamire's and other players' previous drug and legal problems.

Patterson also said he would void Stoudamire's contract if he could, but hasn't found a provision in the contract that would allow him to do so.

Stoudamire has been arrested twice before on drug charges. In November, Stoudamire agreed to attend drug and alcohol counseling and stay out of legal trouble for one year to avoid misdemeanor charges after he and teammate Rasheed Wallace were passengers in a vehicle that was stopped for speeding outside Chehalis, Wash. and a search turned up a small amount of marijuana, police said.

If convicted of the latest charges, Stoudamire would face a mandatory sentence of one day in jail because of that previous agreement.

Earlier in 2002, Stoudamire was charged with a felony after police found a large bag of marijuana in his home while responding to a burglar alarm. A judge declared the search illegal.

Portland School Board Members

Dilafruz Williams, an immigrant from India, joins the Portland School Board, representing zone seven.

With only a two-and-a-half-year institutional memory, senior school board members have expressed concern about a school board with four new members. For the first time in many years, none of the four board members with expiring terms ran for re-election in May, resulting in a rare occurrence where a majority of the school board members are new.

Kicking off a new era on the Portland School Board, the newly elected members took office this week, following a swearing-in ceremony at Grout Elementary School in Southeast Portland on Monday.

Incoming members are Doug Morgan, Bobbie Regan, Dilafruz Williams, David Wynde and student representative Noel Miller.

Also participating in the ceremony were the current school board members Julia Brim-Edwards, Derry Jackson and Lorenzo Poe.

Medical Marijuana Cards On Sale

Program runs a financial surplus, and passes the savings along to low-income clients partment of Human Services issues medical marijuana cards for $150. It then charges a $150 annual renewal fee.

Cards are commonly issued for AIDS, cancer, multiple sclerosis or glaucoma. Some doctors sign off on cards for back pain or headaches.

The state has issued more than 5,500 cards since 1999, and the popularity of the program has brought a $300,000 surplus over the past two years, said Mary Leverette, the program's director.

Beginning July 1, low-income people who qualify for Supplemental Social Security Income or the Oregon Health Plan, the state's version of Medicaid, can apply for a card for $50. They will also pay $50 for the renewal fee.

Everybody else will continue to pay $150 for new applications. The renewal fee for everybody was reduced to $100.

The other states with medical marijuana laws are: California, Washington, Alaska, Hawaii, Maine, Nevada, Maryland and Colorado. Some state's charge only nominal fees, such as Hawaii's $25. There is no fee in California.

(AP)—Oregon's medical marijuana program is running a financial surplus, and will get rid of it by reducing fees for people who qualify for federal poverty assistance.

Oregon is the first of the nine states that allows marijuana to be smoked for medicinal purposes to offer discounts to low-income people, advocates of the drug say.

"This sounds like a pioneering idea," said Dale Gieringer, an activist with the National Organization for Reform in Marijuana Law, in a telephone interview from Oakland, Calif.

"States should encourage this medicine," he said. "It's very economical and helps people reduce their pharmaceutical bills."

Under Oregon's voter-approved program, the state De-
