Summer Fun at the Children's Museum

Portland's Children's Museum has packed its summer schedule with things to see and do for kids of all ages.

Kids can tinker in The Garage to create imaginative sculptures from wood, metal, fabric, wheels and gears; jam with guitar minstrel Johnny Keener; enjoy Toddler Time with stories, songs and puppets; and take part in drop-in art workshops.

In addition, the Homowo: African Arts Summer Camp is from June 28 through July 2 at the Children's Museum. The camp includes dance, drumming, singing, storytelling, crafts and authentic African games.

Titanic Mystery Explored at OMSI

The Oregon Museum of Science and Industry has opened a special exhibit "Titanic Science: The Real Artifacts, The True Stories," combining years of research with science and human drama.

This powerful experience is highly interactive, taking visitors through an exploration of the disaster and the emotional journey that resulted in the loss of more than 1,500 lives, including a handful of Oregonians.

The exhibit is divided into several sections that ask and answer some of the questions that have haunted the events of April 14, 1912. The museum is also showing the film "Titanica" at OMSI's
