Capt. James J. Yee

Chaplain Honorably Discharged

Attorney says justice triumphed

(AP) — A Muslim chaplain imprisoned for 76 days in solitary confinement and then cleared in an espionage investigation will receive an honorable discharge, his lawyer said Wednesday.

The Army approved the request from Capt. James J. Yee on Sept. 13, a year and three days after Yee was arrested at Guantanamo Bay, carrying what authorities alleged were classified documents.

"It's amazing to think just over a year ago, he was behind bars ... and being vilified throughout the country," attorney Eugene R. Fidell said. "On a certain level, justice has triumphed."

Yee has declined to comment on the case, but in his letter of resignation to the Army last month he expressed resentment.

"Those unfounded allegations - which were leaked to the media - irreparably injured my personal and professional reputation and destroyed my prospects for a career in the United States Army," Yee said.

Yee, 35, is now stationed at Fort Lewis near Tacoma, where he will continue to serve until he is discharged in January, Fidell said.

Fort Lewis spokesman Lt. Col. Bill Costello did not immediately return a call for comment Wednesday.

Yee ministered to prisoners at the Guantanamo Bay naval station, where the U.S. military is holding suspected terrorists.

Bible College Expands Opportunities

Two new certificate programs will begin this fall at North Portland Bible College. The fall term, which starts Monday, Sept. 27, will include the initial classes leading to certificates in pastoral ministry and biblical lay counseling. The college has also recently received its state certification.

Dr. Richard White, a long-time college staff advisor, will teach the pastoral ministry series, "Pastoral Leadership." The class will provide the opportunity to focus on each student's own aspects of ministry.

Topics will include refreshment and growth in ministry effectiveness, study of contemporary issues that confront Christians today, ready access to a growing library that includes both old and new volumes, bonding and fellowship with other pastors across denominational lines and more.

Many people have called the college during the past months to find out whether the college offered a program in "biblical lay counseling" and some classes have been offered that have been much appreciated, college leaders said. Now the college is offering a planned program that will lead to a certificate in this aspect of Christian ministry, for both lay persons and clergy.

The new course of study "The Search for Significance" is geared for a society that has great need for persons skilled in "helping the hurting." The class will be taught by Carol Chism.

For more information, call the college at 503-288-2919 or by make an appointment with Student Advisor Earnestine Cestelle.
