Medical Marijuana Legality Changes New Year brings new laws

(AP) — Holders of medical marijuana cards in Oregon now will be allowed to have up to 1 1/2 pounds of dried marijuana and six mature plants under a new state law that takes effect Jan. 1.

The increased possession limit, part of an effort to clear up ambiguities in the state's 1998 medical marijuana program, was among the hundreds of new laws approved by the 2005 Oregon Legislature.

Other new laws taking effect New Year's Day include ones to stiffen high school graduation requirements, require seat belt use in taxis and shuttle vans and require the Oregon State Police to create a Web site with a list of high-risk sex offenders.

One of the co-sponsors of the new medical marijuana law, state Sen. Bill Morrisette, said it's aimed at putting the program "on more solid footing" by making it easier for police to interpret the law and harder for criminals to exploit it.

"It protects these patients and plugs some of the loopholes law enforcement people were worried about," the Springfield Democrat said.

The change also has been endorsed by Stormy Ray, a multiple sclerosis patient who was a leading spokeswoman for the 1998 ballot measure authorizing medical marijuana. She says the new law will ensure that she can obtain enough marijuana, which she says helps ease her pain and helps her sleep at night.

"It's a wonderful day for cardholders," said Ray, who is one of 12,000 Oregonians who hold state registration cards authorizing them to use medical marijuana.

Current law permits cardholders and caregivers — people who grow marijuana for cardholders who can't or don't want to grow their own — to grow three mature and four immature plants and to possess up to three ounces of dried marijuana.

Under the law taking effect Jan. 1, cardholders will be allowed to grow up to six mature plants and 18 seedlings and possess 24 ounces of dried marijuana.

However, in exchange for the increased possession limits, the Legislature approved a provision sought by police saying that patients and caregivers can no longer argue in court that having more than the specified amounts is a medical necessity and therefore permissible.

Also, caregivers will be limited to growing plants for no more than four patients per year.

Notice of Public Hearing on Community Needs

In May 2006, the City of Portland, Multnomah County, and the City of Gresham will submit the one-year Action Plan FY 2006-07 to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Plan is a combined plan and application for federal funds available to cities and counties under four programs: Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), HOME Investment Partnerships (HOME), Emergency Shelter Grant (ESG), and Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS (HOPWA). The Action Plans FY 2006-07 will detail spending for the coming fiscal year.

Before issuing the FY 2006-07 Action Plans, the jurisdictions want to give local residents and providers the opportunity to present information and views on housing and community development needs and priorities. A hearing will be held during the Housing and Community Development Commission meeting scheduled for:

Wednesday, January 4, 2006, 7:15 p.m.
The Multnomah Building, Board Room, First Floor
501 SE Hawthorne, Portland

All comments received at the hearing will be considered in preparing the jurisdictions' FY 2006-07 Action Plans. HCDC will also accept written comments through February 4, 2006. Please address written comments to HCDC, c/o City of Portland, 421 SW 6th Avenue, Portland, OR 97204 or send them to bkaye@ci.portland.or.us. A summary of public comments will be included in the final Plan document.

Lesson in Profiling

The family urges other African-Americans not to shop at G.I. Joes until racial profiling for potential shoplifters is put to an end.

The family is also urging others that have been accused by G.I. Joes of shoplifting to come forward. One piece of advice that Ms. Caston offers is to stick together as a group when shopping so there will be witnesses. Also, she suggests keeping a notepad with you to take accurate notes in case of an event like this. "I don't want to shop at a place where I am going to be singled out because of my race. I like to enjoy my shopping experiences," she said.

Not only did G.I. Joes lose a customer that day, Ms. Caston also returned the merchandise she had purchased in protest — two pairs of ski pants valued at more than $100 total.

The Castons live in Sacramento, Calif., but were in Portland for a business trip.
