Bouncing Back

Nearly a year after Hurricane Katrina submerged Xavier University's campus in New Orleans under eight feet of water, Illinois Sen. Barack Obama (left) joined university president Norman C. Francis on Saturday, to celebrate one of its largest graduating classes. "Thanks for allowing me to share in your miracle," Obama said. Xavier, the country's only historically black and Roman Catholic college, reopened in January. (AP photo)

Mixing Fine Wines, Jazz

Headline acts on Sunday, Aug. 27 include 2005 Grammy winners Spanish Harlem Orchestra, and seven-time Grammy-winner and Latin jazz pianist Eddie Palmieri with his orchestra. The festival also features regional a world-class event for wine lovers, with over 200 individual wines from 35 wineries. Wines can be sampled throughout the weekend by the 1-ounce taste, and purchased by the glass, bottle or case. Last year, nearly 30,000 glasses of wine were poured during the three-day run. The festival is also about fine art, said Fine Artist Manager Linda Marsh. "We select a limited group of 50 artists from a pool of hundreds of applicants through a competitive jury process" Marsh said. "This year we have outstanding artists from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, California and Arizona exhibiting and selling their art at the festival."

Kissinger calls the festival a complete cultural event.

"This is not just for the jazz aficionado," he said. "It's for anyone who loves great music, and wants to hear outstanding jazz artists. But, it's also for the person who wants to have a wonderful time sampling wine, eating good food, and maybe purchasing a nice piece of fine art. Our goal is to bring people together to experience a complete artistic event—and hopefully, they will leave with a greater appreciation for jazz music."

The Festival is held at Esther Short Park in the heart of downtown Vancouver. Advance Tickets are $16 per day or $20 at the gate. Children under 12 are free with a paid adult. Tickets are available at the gate, or at all Safeway TicketsWest outlets.

Neighbors Step Up for Livability

trash," he said. Danielson's response was filling the holes himself, feeling it was not that big of a job, and building an alliance with other local residents to improve livability issues. Most of the concerns were over the poor upkeep of public spaces on Dekum between Martin Luther King, Jr. Blvd and Northeast 15th Avenue. Some of the neighbors tried to keep up with the stray trash by collecting it themselves and took money from their own pockets to paint over the unfading graffiti near their homes. But they were overwhelmed in the process.

"Many of these empty patches of land between the street and sidewalks are the homeowners' concern, the city's concern, and Tri-Met's concern," Danielson said. "Since they are all semi-responsible, they are all semi-abandoned as well."

The neighbors and volunteers were soon united in a bus stop project targeting the main problematic area near the Dekum Triangle. The central concern was to create a safe and clean place for his neighbors and wife to wait for the bus.

Many volunteers donated their time, money, and materials to create and maintain a bus stop unique to the Woodlawn community. "A variety of people have helped," Danielson said. "From a homeless man to a couple kids heading to school."

The stop's central design includes a wooden bench constructed from a 200-pound donated industrial cable spool made by Matt Cartwright. Cartwright has been a volunteer for City Repair and other projects since 1999.

"I do it for the volunteer and art opportunities," he said.

Local artist and Woodlawn resident Christy Fish designed an adjacent red rose sidewalk mural, symbolic of Portland's most notorious flower.

The art was inspired by the desire to unite a diversified Woodlawn community.
