

Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

— Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Day of Service at Lewis & Clark

Instead of a day off from work or school, Lewis & Clark College students, faculty and staff members will celebrate the legacy of Martin Luther King Jr. with a day of service.

The office of student leadership and service, in cooperation with the office of ethnic student services, is hosting Lewis & Clark's first Martin Luther King Jr. Day of Service on Monday, Jan. 15.

"By honoring Dr. King with a day of service, we are hoping to reflect Lewis & Clark's genuine commitment to civic engagement," said Kelly Hoover, coordinator of student leadership and service. "We are turning community concerns into citizen action."

Lewis & Clark has joined the national Day of Service effort by planning three volunteer opportunities for staff, faculty, students and their families to participate. Volunteers can work to weatherize homes at a local low-income housing complex, move books at Roosevelt High School to make way for computers, or assist with a water quality education program for low-income families.

Thomas J. Hochstetler, president of Lewis & Clark College, has announced that the College will remain open for the holiday. More information is available lclark.edu/dept/service/mlkday.

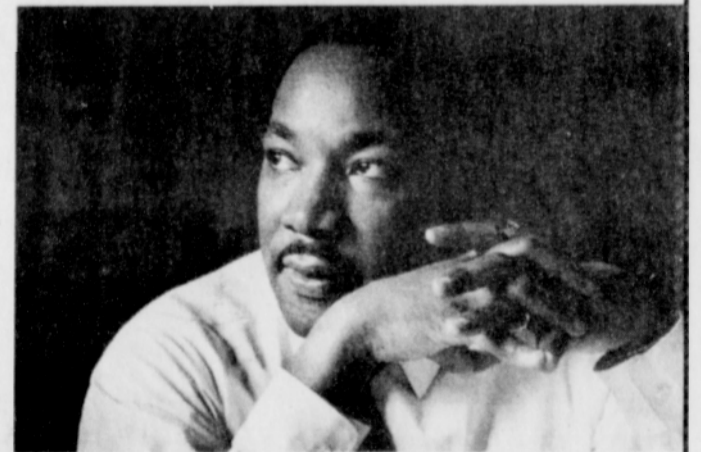

Stokely Carmichael, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee project director in Lowndes County, hugs a young friend to celebrate the creation of an independent political party under Alabama law.

In September 1966, King escorts students with Andrew Young, Joan Baez and Hosea Williams (behind King left to right) past adult mobs that have terrorized black children outside the schools of Grenada, Mississippi.

ECONOMIC EMPOWERMENT

The Portland Development Commission believes that economic opportunity should be shared throughout the community. PDC is committed to working with its partners to increase minority home ownership, to create opportunities for minority-owned, women-owned, and emerging small businesses, and to value employee diversity. For more information about how PDC is investing in Portland's future, visit www.pdc.us.

PDC honors Martin Luther King, Jr. on the 78th anniversary of his birth.

Investing in Portland's Future

PDC
PORTLAND
DEVELOPMENT
COMMISSION

FULLFILL THE DREAM.