

Alabama listeners ponder King's message on his last tour.

In response to discrimination in voter registration policies, a five-day, 54-mile march along an Alabama highway is led by King (in white cap), Coretta King, James Bevel, John Lewis (behind and to right), and Ivanhoe Donaldson (below flagpole), with Andrew Young and James Orange (far left).

¶ Cowardice asks the question- is it safe? Expediency asks the question- is it politic? Vanity asks the question- is it popular? But conscience asks the question- is it right? ¶

On primary day, May 3, 1966, voting for the first time in their lives, black citizens of Lowndes County choose their own candidates for local office. Seated at one of the outdoor election tables, school teacher Sarah Logan (in white glasses) collects ballots bearing a novel black panther as the required election symbol, observed by Jesse "Note" Favors (far right), a runner-up for the sheriff's nomination.
