Queen Latifah (standing) plays Motormouth Maybelle alongside John Travolta in drag, in the remake of the 1988 film "Hairspray."

Queen Latifah Goes Platinum in 'Hairspray'

Stars in remake of cult classic

Queen Latifah evokes the past as Motormouth Maybelle in the early 1960s world of "Hairspray," coming to theaters this Friday, July 20.

They say blondes have more fun and Queen Latifah is certainly proof of that. The versatile star had to swap her long dark tresses for a brassy platinum crop in her latest movie Hairspray, and says she couldn't get enough of her new look.

"Being blonde brought out a whole other side of me," she says excitedly. "It was a side I didn't even know I had. I've had my hair lightened but never been platinum like that before. It was cool - I felt like a superhero with all that hair. I felt powerful."

"Hairspray" is a remake of the 1988 John Waters big-screen cult classic about overweight teenager Tracy Turnblad, who dreams of dancing on the hit TV program "The Corny Collins Show," but finds her big ambitions thwarted by jealous competitors.

In the latest outing, Latifah joins a host of stars, including John Travolta, Michelle Pfeiffer and Christopher Walken, to play Maybelle - a feisty high-school teacher who joins forces with Tracy to fight racial inequality.

Latifah also has a new album coming out, "Trav'lin' Light," to be released Sept. 25. She plans a national tour in the fall in support of the album.
