Roberta Flack at Chinook Winds

Born in Ashville, N. C., Flack received her earliest influences from the church. By the age of 15, she enrolled at Howard University on a full music scholarship, making her one of the youngest students to ever enroll there. By the age of 19, she earned her Music in Education certificate and began teaching music. Her passion for music grew and so did America's love of her voice.

In 1971, Roberta and Donny Hathaway collaborated on "You've Got a Friend." Again, her peerless interpretation of the contemporary pop hits won her critical acclaim. Clint Eastwood personally decided to include "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face" in his thriller, "Play Misty For Me." Atlantic rushed the song, from her first album, out as a single, and in seven weeks it went to #1 on the charts.

At the 1973 Grammy Awards ceremony, "First Time Ever" won Record of the Year and Song of the Year, while "Where is The Love" won for Best Pop Vocal by a Duo.

Flack has continued to entertain audiences throughout the world with her record-breaking music and legendary voice. The turn of the millennium has shown that Roberta has no intention of slowing down.

With international tour dates including Turkey, Argentina, Australia and Japan, she is constantly inspired by seeing firsthand that her music continues to be loved and enjoyed around the world.
