Youth Build Success

search on Occupational and Environmental Toxicology at Oregon Health Sciences University, kicked off the day with a general address.

She used the stories of three children from different countries who all came to the United States and became educated, successful and are making positive differences on people all over the globe, urging the youth to follow their dreams, strive to reach their goals and make a difference.

Palmer, a Zulu who grew up poor on a small farm in South Africa, escaped apartheid at age 17 by traveling to England. When that country refused her asylum, she came to the U.S., where she completed her education and launched a career in research on the causes and cures of diseases affecting poor people in developing countries.

Also included in the conference were an African youth fashion show and African music provided by DJ Menzies.
