

Promoting Excellence and Student Success:

College executive makes it her priority

Marta Dragomir of Clark College has been named an "Accomplished & Under 40" honoree by the Vancouver Business Journal.

Dragomir serves as executive assistant in the Communications and Marketing Department of the college. She graduated summa cum laude from DeVry University in Long Beach with a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration.

In addition, Dragomir works with the Clark College President's office to plan and execute major college events including last year's commencement ceremony featuring Gov. Chris Gregoire, the annual Clark College Distinguished Lecture Series, the State of the College Address and the Clark College-YWCA Women of Achievement celebration.

Dragomir supports student success by serving as the co-advisor for the college's Latino Club for students. Last year, she coordinated the college's first Cinco de Mayo celebration, held for the college and the general community.

In the community, she has served as a Sunday school teacher for Crossroads Community Church in Vancouver. She has recently signed up to become a mentor in the "I Have a Dream" program of South-west Washington.

Clark College President Robert K. Knight said, "When you think

"When you think about the people who make a college run smoothly, you probably think first about faculty and administrators...But some of the most valuable contributions at Clark College are made by people who work quietly but effectively behind the scenes. Marta Dragomir is one of those exceptional individuals."

Environmental Health, Safety Program Coming to Mt. Hood

In partnership with the Oregon Occupational Safety and Health Division, Mt. Hood Community College is establishing the state's first Occupational Health and Safety Instructional Center on a college campus.

The new center will become a part of the college's Environmental Health and Safety degree program.

"This alliance allows the college to become a major training center in promoting safety and health in the workplace," said Dr. Javid Mohtasham. "Everyone from laborers to law enforcement will be able to obtain the training that addresses health and safety issues."

Michael Wood, Oregon's OSHA administrator, said one of the reasons the state chose MHCC is because of its established efforts in health and safety education.

"The college offers state-of-the-art instructional facilities, making it a perfect location to house such a center," he said.

For more information, call Dr. Javid Mohtasham at 503-491-7440.
