Foxy Brown's Reinvention

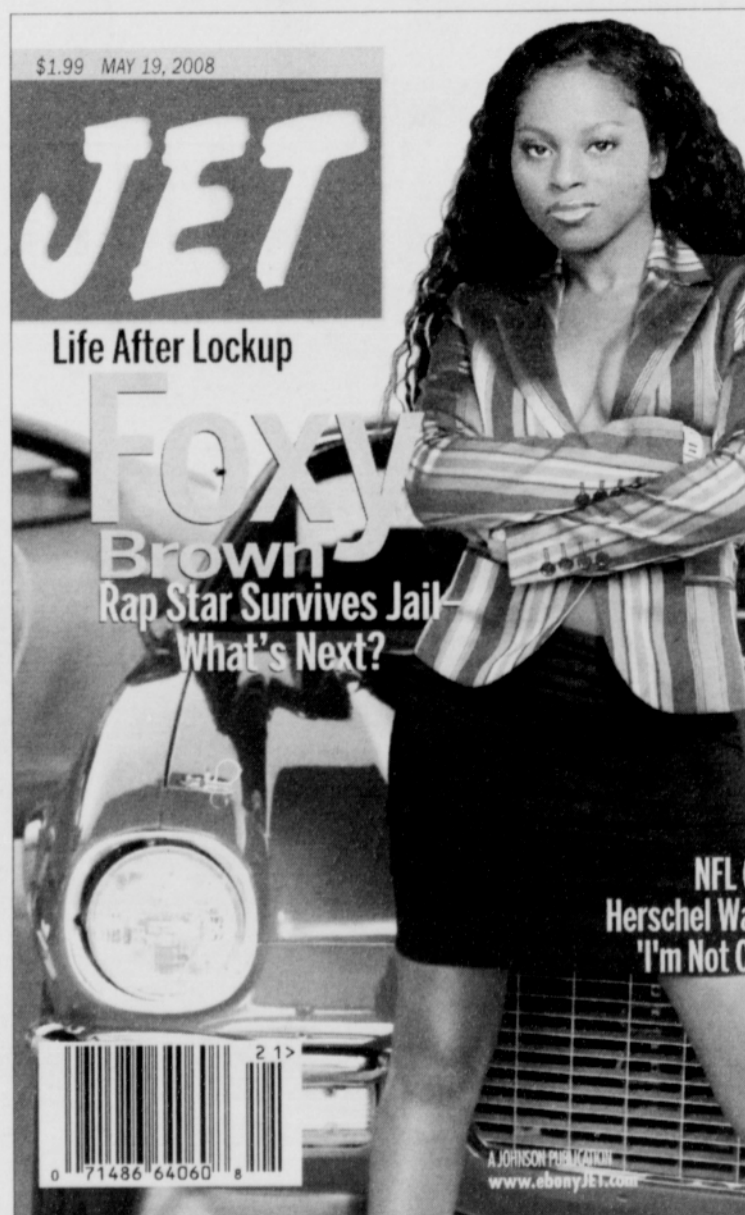

Rap star says she's starting over again

Foxy Brown is free. After serving eight months of a one-year sentence for probation violations, the rap star is now on the road to reinvention.

"I want to do things different now and to show people the maturation. There will be a big change, but no one does a 360 overnight. I've learned to accept my shortcomings and flaws. I've made mistakes," she tells JET magazine.

With a new outlook on life, Brown has released an independent mix tape for the streets, "Brooklyn's Don Diva." The lyrical diva is slated to drop a double CD on Christmas Eve, entitled "Black Roses," her first album in seven years.

"I believe she has the skills. They aren't going anywhere," said Poke of the duo Trackmasters, who discovered Brown. "Coming this time around, she needs to fix her attitude toward the business and how to deal with people."

Independent Women's Film Festival

The Portland Women's Film Festival showcases the very best contemporary international independent films made by women, Thursday, May 15 through Sunday, May 18 at the historic Hollywood Theater on Northeast Sandy Boulevard. The annual event promotes and creates opportunities for women working in all areas of the film industry, educating the greater community through filmmaker panels and hands-on workshops.

A rockin' kick-off party at the Ace Hotel's Cleaners space downtown will exhibit select women-made movies, moderate several exciting filmmaker panels, host an expo of women-owned and served businesses, and offer a day-long screenwriting workshop.
