Meeting to Support Grandmother

A community meeting to draw support for a local African American woman's battle to adopt two of her grandchildren has been scheduled for held Monday, Oct. 27 at Calvary Church, 126 N.E. Alberta St., from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Carolynn Smith is about to lose her grandchildren, Kofi and C'Lynn, to a permanent adoption, despite her four year campaign to raise them with their five sisters and brothers.

Smith urgently needs help to stop a permanent adoption order scheduled on Thursday, Oct. 30 before Judge Nan G. Waller, according to Midge Purcell, coordinator of organization and public affairs for the Urban League of Portland.

All issues regarding the welfare of these children may have not been given adequate attention, in particular whether they will be raised in an environment that is sensitive and competent to address their cultural needs, Purcell said.

People are also urged to write to Judge Waller at the Multnomah County Juvenile Justice Division, 1401 N.E. 68th Ave., Portland, OR 97213, and ask her to stop the adoption order to give the Department of Human Resources an opportunity to review their decision.

Earth-Friendly Remodeling

Neil Kelly Design, a local company that puts emphasis on environmentally sound and sustainable remodeling practices, is offering free remodeling advice during seminars on Saturday, Nov. 15 and Wednesday, Nov. 19, at the firm's Westside showroom at 15573 S.W. Bangy Rd. in Lake Oswego.

Neil Kelly designers will provide information on design trends, new materials and techniques, as well as tips on managing the professional design and building process. The one-hour sessions are informal in style, allowing for discussion.

The free monthly seminar series will resume on Saturday, Jan. 10, following a holiday break. Full information on the seminar schedule and content is available on the web at neilkelly.com or by calling 503-335-9204.

Energy costs are reduced when natural light is added to a kitchen remodel.
