Samudra the baby elephant, along with a blockbuster dinosaur exhibit and other family-friendly events helped boost the Oregon Zoo's attendance to the highest in the zoo's history.

Visits to Oregon Zoo Set Record

Baby elephant attracts crowd

A blockbuster dinosaur exhibit, a baby elephant, camps, concerts and family-friendly events helped boost the Oregon Zoo's attendance to more than 1.6 million visits, the highest figure in the zoo's 122-year history.

Oregon Zoo Director Tony Vecchio attributed the record year to the popularity of its dinosaur exhibit last summer and the arrival of Samudra, the charismatic baby elephant who has stolen the hearts of zoo visitors.

Vecchio noted that zoo attendance might have been even higher if severe winter storms hadn't forced the zoo to close for nearly a week in late December, a peak time for its popular ZooLights winter light display.

Events such as the summer concert series and the World Animal Festival also brought in big numbers, while the increased revenues help the zoo fund its many conservation and education programs.

The first time the zoo's attendance topped a million was during 1962-63, the fiscal year immediately following Packy's birth in April 1962. The baby pachyderm drew 1,010,964 spectators from all over the Northwest, eager to see the first elephant born in the United States in 44 years.

It wasn't until 1988-89 that the zoo broke the million mark again. Since then, the zoo has welcomed more than a million guests in 17 of the past 20 years.

The Oregon Zoo continues to have the highest attendance of any fee-based tourist attraction in Oregon.

The zoo is a service of Metro regional government and is dedicated to its mission to inspire the community to create a better future for wildlife. Committed to conservation, the zoo is currently working to save endangered California condors, Washington's pygmy rabbits, Oregon silverspot butterflies, western pond turtles, Oregon spotted frogs and Kincaid's lupine.

Other projects include studies on black rhinos, Asian elephants, polar bears and bats.
