Free Film, Free Fun

On Sunday, March 14, families are invited to the Portland Art Museum for Celebrating Film.

This free admission event, sponsored by the Northwest Film Center, will feature do it yourself animation, interactive play spaces, improvisational theater games, film screenings, kid-friendly food, and motion themed-gallery tours. Activities take place throughout the day from 12-5 p.m.

Northwest Film Center faculty will be teaching kids of all ages the principles of motion using zoetropes and thaumatropes, which spin and whirl simple drawings into animated moving images. Visitors can also make their own flipbook, play with digitally projected butterflies, and help create the soundtrack for a 1960s Japanese monster movie, live on stage, with the group Filmusik.

For those interested in acting for the camera, Oregon Children's Theater will be leading high energy interactive theater games such as Zip, Zap, Zop!, Whoosh I am a Tree, and Complaint Counter.

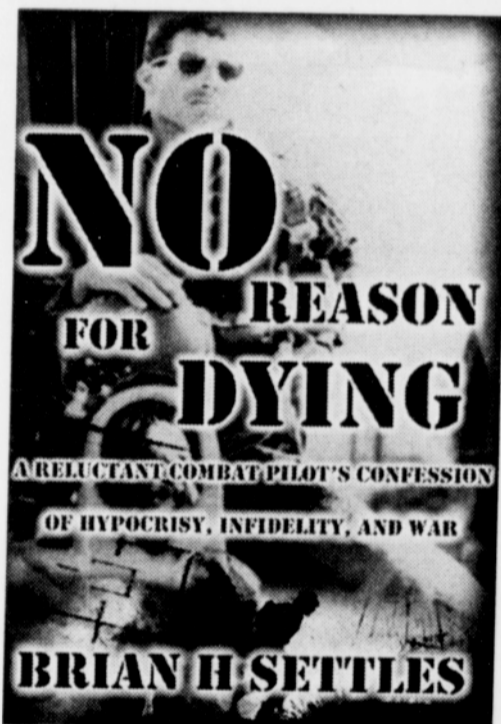

The Art Museum is located at 1219 S.W. Park Ave., downtown.

From 1960s Sit-ins to War Combat pilot comes of age in Vietnam

What was the effect of going to war on an African American fighter pilot who lived through the 1960s sit-ins, Birmingham voter registration marches, the March on Washington, Black Panther Party shootouts, riots in Watts, Detroit and Newark, and the assassinations of President Kennedy, his brother Bobby, and Dr. King?

"I was conflicted, to say the least," recalls Brian H. Settles, author of "No Reason for Dying: A Reluctant Combat Pilot's Confession of Hypocrisy, Infidelity, and War" (BookSurge, 2009).

"Many of my contemporaries felt the war was unconscionable. And, for a 24 year old African American male, that seemed to be especially true. But I'd made a commitment for the opportunity to fly fighter jets, and it was my decision to honor that commitment, whatever the cost," Settles said. "I just didn't know how great the cost would be."

early years were spent in a Nebraska orphanage, and after his adoptive parents divorced, he struggled with a heightened sense of detachment as a biracial child growing up in the segregated Midwest.

He carried this crisis of identity with him into the war where his insecurities from the past erupted over the skies of Southeast Asia with a vengeance. Now a retired airline captain, his is the voice of the warrior poet. Captain Settles says, "We must seek to identify the blessings in our lives although they may be draped in the trauma of crisis."
