Dear Deanna!

My sister has moved in with me and it's a total disaster. She is a liar, a thief and a master manipulator. I am used to a calm life that doesn't involve anyone opening my mail, answering my phone and acting as if they live in a hotel with room service. I'm going to put her out but I have to face drama from my family because she's told them a pack of lies. Our family is torn and she already has everyone on her side. How do I evict her and still save face? --Anonymous; Los Angeles

Dear Anonymous:

You need your sister and all of this madness just like you need a hole in the head. However, your sister is someone you grew up with and you knew most things about her before she moved in. This decision is quick and to the point. If it's your house, your rules and your money, then she needs to shape up or ship out. If you have some joint agreements, then you need to change some locks, make new rules and try again before sending her packing.

Dear Deanna!

I'm the babysitter for my neighbor and the kid's father is starting to make hints that he wants a relationship. He has given me flowers and we shared a bottle of wine when his wife was out of town. He's putting pressure on me to be intimate but I don't feel comfortable in his house. I need to talk to him to see what he wants from me and what his plans are for his marriage. How do I have this discussion? --Stressed Babysitter; Charleston, S.C.

Dear Babysitter:

The only discussion you need to have is the one asking for your check from his wife and ending your services. This man only wants you for sex because his wife is away working and he sees a willing babysitter. Don't be flattered by the wine because that was part of his game to get you to give it up. You don't need to discuss anything with him except the fact you're not interested and he needs to find another babysitter and keep it moving.

Dear Deanna!

I am fresh out of a long term relationship and I really enjoy my single life and freedom. My girlfriends all envy me and now their boyfriends are accusing them of cheating and looking for men when they hang out with me. I am not going to water down my lifestyle right now and my friends are having a hard time with this. They say that I am acting loose and as if I don't have any morals. I think they're tied down to balls and chains and are jealous. Am I wrong? --Happy and Free; Online Reader

Dear Happy:

The men of your friends are insecure and obviously don't know their women as well as they think. If your behavior is affecting them, you need to cool off and slow it down a bit when you're around them. These are your friends and you need to still show some respect and regard for the differences in your relationships, or lack thereof. At the end of the day, enjoy your life and realize that everyone is responsible for their choices. Yours just appears more fun right now
