McMenamins Opens Crystal Hotel

McMenamins Crystal Hotel & Ballroom, the two-building property located on Southwest Burnside Street between 12th and 14th Avenues in downtown Portland, opens its doors to grand opening celebration this week.

On Thursday, May 5, McMenamins will feature live music with M. Ward, Corin Tucker Band, Scott McCaughey & Friends, Charlie Gabriel & The Mel Brown Trio, Carl Smith & the Natural Gas Co. and a host of others, along with DJ'ed music, ales, wines and spirits tastings, street buskers, bagpipers and much more.

Some events are free and open to the public, while others require tickets through locally owned CascadeTickets.com. A portion of proceeds from the three-day event will be donated to GLAPN (Gay and Lesbian Archives of the Pacific Northwest) as a way to celebrate the Crystal Hotel building's former history as part of Portland's Gay Triangle.

The Zeus Café in the Crystal Hotel will be open daily for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

'Poetry Man' Singer, Dies at 60

(AP) -- Phoebe Snow, a bluesy singer, guitarist and songwriter who had a defining hit of the 1970s with "Poetry Man" but then largely dropped out of the spotlight to care for her disabled daughter, has died.

Snow, who was nominated for best new artist at the 1975 Grammys, died Tuesday morning in Edison,

N.J., from complications of a brain hemorrhage she suffered in January 2010, said Rick Miramontez, her long-time friend and public relations representative. She was 60.

Snow's manager, Sue Cameron, said the singer endured bouts of blood clots, pneumonia and congestive heart failure since her stroke.

Phoebe Snow

"The loss of this unique and untouchable voice is incalculable," Cameron said. "Phoebe was one of the brightest, funniest and most talented singer-songwriters of all time and, more importantly, a magnificent mother to her late brain-damaged daughter, Valerie, for 31 years. Phoebe felt that was her greatest accomplishment."

Known as a folk guitarist who made forays into jazz and blues, Snow put her stamp on soul classics such as "Shakey Ground," "Love Makes a Woman" and "Mercy, Mercy Mercy" on over a half dozen albums.

Not long after Snow's "Poetry Man" reached the Top 5 on the pop singles chart in 1975, her daughter, Valerie Rose, was born with severe brain damage, and Snow decided to care for her at home rather than place her in an institution.
