Father Patrick Conroy, a teacher and coach at Jesuit High School, has been nominated to be the next Chaplain to the U. S. House of Representatives.

Nominated as House Chaplain Jesuit teacher called to Washington, D.C.

Father Patrick Conroy, a chaplain, theology teacher, campus ministry assistant, and coach at Jesuit High School, has been nominated to be the next Chaplain to the U. S. House of Representatives.

Father Conroy would be the first Jesuit priest to serve in this position. The Chaplain of the House opens each session of Congress with prayer to ask God's blessing on the nation and the work of the members of the House of Representatives. The Chaplain also prays for special Congressional events on Capitol Hill, provides pastoral counseling to the House community, coordinates the scheduling of guest chaplains, and arranges memorial services for the House and its staff. In the past, Chaplains have also performed marriage and funeral ceremonies for House members.

"One does not aspire to become the Chaplain to a chamber of Congress," said Father Conroy. "This opportunity to serve is an extraordinary gift, and I hope to be worthy of the trust the Speaker of the House and the Minority Leader are extending to me. I am also humbled by the confidence my Jesuit superiors are demonstrating in making me available to answer this call to serve the People's House."

Father Conroy is best known by his students as a teacher and for his engaging and challenging homilies, his legendary storytelling abilities, and his singing and guitar-playing around the campfire on retreats.

He will be sworn in as the 60th Chaplain of the U.S. House of Representatives on May 25. His first day as Chaplain will be May 16.
