and directed by Randy Johnson, who previously directed Elvis, the Concert, as well as originally produced a musical event on Patsy Cline, and celebrates the life of one of rock n' roll's greatest legends.

Produced in association with the estate of Janis Joplin, the show will feature over 20 songs collected from Joplin's blues influences, iconic recordings and performances, including "Piece of My Heart," "Me and Bobby McGee," and "Summertime."

One Night with Janice Joplin will also include an unrecorded, never heard before song, "I'm Gonna Rock My Way to Heaven." Joplin died before she was able to record the song, written for her by Jerry Ragovoy and Jenny Dean, with input and notes from Janis.

Completing her signature look with round pink sunglasses, long wavy locks, beads and bangles, vocal phenom, Cat Stephani, will step into the boots of Janis Joplin and perform the blues singer's iconic role.

Shows will continue through June 26th. For a full calendar of performances and ticket availability, visit pcs.org. Portland Center Stage is located in the Gerding Theater at the Armory at 128 N.W. 11th Ave.

Sunday Parkway for East Portland

Traffic free streets connect people, parks

Rain or shine, Portland Sunday Parkways begins its annual run on Sunday, May 22, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in southeast Portland.

The free community event, one of five to be hosted in 2011, connects parks and traffic-free streets where thousands of people can gather for activities, music and vendors.

All Portlanders are welcome to join the fun and encouraged to come connect with their neighbors, be active and get some exercise, including pedestrians and bicyclists who will be able to safely stroll and ride during the Sunday Parkways.

The east Portland route connects

Lents, Bloomington, Ed Benedict and Gilbert Heights Parks with seven miles of traffic-free streets and a long section of the Springwater Trail. All other streets will be open for vehicular traffic.

A Metro mini disc golf course will be set up in Ed Benedict Park, Kaiser Permanente and Playworks will be at the Kids Fair at Gilbert Heights Park, dance classes are scheduled all day by Portland Parks and Recreation, and soccer skills and tournament activities will be at Bloomington Park.

The public should expect traffic control changes in the vicinity of the event and be aware of increased numbers of pedestrians and bicyclists. Residents will have access to their homes and can cross the route at the designated intersections.
