Oregon Zoo's Summer Camps

Opportunities for fun and learning

Have you made plans for summer? Opportunities for summer fun and learning are going fast at the Oregon Zoo. The zoo's popular summer camps return June 20, with programs for children 4 years of age through eighth grade. Camps are filling quickly though, and families should register now to make sure they don't miss out.

Camp activities, specifically planned for the interests of each age group, cover everything from learning about fur, feathers and scales to designing your own zoo. Each weeklong camp includes art projects, songs, stories, snacks, train rides, animal visitors and in-depth tours of the zoo.

Turtle Camp is a new daylong camp especially for 4-year-olds — and a good way for young kids to test the waters if they'll be attending full-day kindergarten in the fall. Campers observe the many patterns, sizes, colors and shapes that animals come in — and visit the brightly colored lorikeets to feed them their morning juice! A midday quiet time breaks up the day, and lets youngsters recharge for an afternoon of more adventures.

Otter Camp is all about the Great Northwest. Fourth-grade students focus our native habitats and meet some of the animals that share our part of the world, like cougars, black bears and wolves. They also visit the zoo's Trillium Creek Family Farm and learn about the differences, and similarities, between wild and domesticated animals.

Cougar Camp lets fifth-grade students experience the natural wonders of the world, without leaving the zoo. Cougar campers spend each day exploring a different part of the world through hands-on activities, tours and culturally relevant projects.

Animal Investigators introduces sixth-grade students to animal care, providing an insider's look at the zoo's veterinary hospital and animal kitchen.

The zoo's professional camp staff has been guiding children in exploring and discovering the wonders of the zoo through fun, hands-on learning since 1983. All staff members are screened for excellence in programming for children. Every staff member is required to have previous experience working with children and most have classroom experience.

Most full-day camps are $287 for the week. Half-day Penguin camp for age 4 through kindergarten is $145. For more information and to register, visit the website oregonzoo.org.
