ment training.

"TriMet is dedicated to diversity and opportunity, and Johnell and Martin are key to helping the agency continue to be a leader in this area, as well as reach out and strengthen our partnerships with low income and communities of color," said McFarlane.

Bell brings a broad range of experience working in the region, most recently for U.S. Sen. Jeff Merkley where he represented the senator in Multnomah County, focusing on issues of diversity, community and government relations and environmental justice. His prior experience included work at Multnomah County with former County Chair Ted Wheeler, creating the county's first economic development program and co-creating the Office of Diversity and Equity. For Portland Mayor Tom Potter, Bell worked closely with communities of color and community-based organizations through the Community Connect initiative.

Bell has a bachelor's degree in Management and Leadership Development from Concordia University and is currently enrolled in the Hatfield School of Government Executive Master of Public Administration program at Portland State University.

Gonzalez joined TriMet in 2007 after his work as executive director of the Portland Schools Alliance. He also worked 13 years at the American Friends Service Committee, working on statewide economic development efforts and training, leadership development and fundraising for Latino community organizations.

He is past board president and founder of the Latino Network, a former board president of Centro Cultural and is a current member of the Portland Public School Board. Gonzalez holds a bachelor's degree in education from Texas A & M University.
