Portland Parks and Recreation offers a very cool program for teens that teaches them DJ skills.

DJ Academy students at the University Park Community Center in north Portland use the mixing board and other equipment to produce music for high school dances, businesses and parties at a low cost.

The program recently worked in partnership with Alli Sports to give the participating Portland teens the opportunity to experience the excitement of the Dew Tour skateboarding championships in Portland earlier this month.

DJ Academy students spun music at the Dew Tour all day. This experience allowed the youth, ages 12-18, the opportunity to showcase the skills they learned at University Park.

Instructor Joshua Stohl, a professional DJ who has a teaching certificate from Concordia University, is in charge of the program. Stohl has been connecting with youth through music as a DJ instructor with the parks bureau since 2009.

The next class runs from Sept. 27 through Dec. 6. For more information, call the University Park Community Center at 503-823-3631.
