FOOD

Goblin Feet

Your children can probably imagine what actual goblin feet would taste like. (Dirty socks stuffed with cheese? Moldy tapioca pudding?) Luckily, these cookies are infinitely more tasty.

Ingredients

- *Half package (7 ounces) green meltable candy wafers
- *peanut butter cookies, such as Nutter Butter brand
- *cashew halves

Instructions

Follow the instructions on the candy wafer package to melt the wafers in a wide bowl. For each goblin foot, hold the edge of a cookie and dip it in the melted candy.

Forked Eyeballs

These scary-good Halloween treats, prepared and eaten on the same fork, begin with a doughnut hole dunked in white chocolate.

Ingredients

- *2 (11-ounce) bags white chocolate chips
- *12 doughnut holes
- *Semisweet chocolate chips
- *Tube of red decorator frosting
- *2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Instructions

1. To coat a dozen doughnut holes, melt the white chocolate chips with the oil over low heat (and keep the chocolate warm while you work). With a fork, spear each doughnut hole and submerge it in the melted chocolate to coat it, then gently tap off any excess.
2. Stick a semisweet chocolate chip with its point cut off onto each doughnut hole, cut end first. Place the forks (handle side down) in a mug and allow the chocolate coating to harden.
3. Use a tube of red decorator frosting to add squiggly veins radiating out from the pupils.

Night of the Living Bread

Your kids can play Frankenstein chefs as they assemble a set of weird and wacky mini-pita faces for party snacks.

Ingredients

- *small pita
- *flavored cream cheese or hummus
- *edible features of your choice

Instructions

1. For each, remove one half of the top layer of a small pita. Fill the pita with flavored cream cheese or hummus and add edible features. Our faces have cheese teeth, bologna and cornichon-slice tongues, a cauliflower brain, olive-slice eyes, carrot and scallion hair, a carrot nose, and a pepper mouth.
2. Place the cookie on a sheet of waxed paper and use a spoon to smooth the candy over the spot your fingers covered.
3. Place three cashew halves on the cookie for claws. (The candy may need to cool a minute or two for it to be stiff enough to hold the nuts in place.) Let the cookies set at room temperature.
