Forest and Park Fees Waived

Federal recreation day-use sites will be free over the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday weekend, Jan. 14, 15 and 16 as a way to honor the legacy of the civil rights leader and his work.

The fee waiver applies to lands managed by the U.S. Forest Service, as well as by the National Park Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Bureau of Land Management and Bureau of Reclamation. It does not apply to SnoParks although they might be located on national public lands. The SnoPark permit program is sponsored by the states of Oregon and Washington.

"Honoring Martin Luther King Jr. by waiving day-use fees is one way to recognize the civil rights leader and his contributions to America," said Pacific Northwest Regional Forester Kent Connaughton.

"We encourage the public to get outdoors in America's vast and dynamic playground," said Forest Service Chief Tom Tidwell. "We hope that visiting your beautiful national forests and grasslands will help people gain a deep appreciation for natural resources, and create lifelong memories."

celebration takes place at the Highland Christian Center, 7600 N.E. Glisan St.

"Keep Alive the Dream" is recognized regionally and nationally as one of the finest community-based MLK celebrations in the U.S. The World Arts Foundation gives a voice to the heritage of common citizens' struggle for peace, justice, civil rights, and human dignity.

Invited guests will include a variety of talented performers, including DaNell Daymon and the Greater Works Chorale of Seattle, Derrick McDuffy and Chosen Generation, Linda Hornbuckle, Janice Scroggins, Reggie Houston, the No Kidding

Choir, the Inspirational Sounds from Eugene, the nationally acclaimed Jefferson Dancers, student choirs from Portland schools, and the Portland and Vancouver chapters of Gospel Music Workshop of America.

Lifetime achievement awards for individuals and organizations with exemplary public service records will be recognized during the program. Mayor Sam Adams will join several other local and state leaders on stage.

In addition to a full day of voices, music, and historic purpose, a robust Dreamers Village and Bazaar is featured on the Highland Christian Center campus. A full range of vendors will present: arts, crafts, services, educational materials, cuisine, photographs, films, and a cultural-rich network of arts and education innovations.

Participants in the MLK tribute are encouraged to make a donation of $5 or bring five cans of non-perishable food for distribution to local food banks.
