First lady Michelle Obama interacts with the cast of the popular children's show, "iCarly," premiering Monday, Jan. 16 on Nickelodeon.

First Lady Cameo on Nickelodeon Appearance on 'iCarly' supports military families

(AP) — Teen star Miranda Cosgrove says she doesn't usually get nervous about taping episodes of her Nickelodeon comedy, "iCarly," but that changed when first lady Michelle Obama taped an appearance on the show.

"I've been doing the show for a long time and I usually don't get nervous, but having the first lady on the set, I was really nervous," laughed Cosgrove, 18.

Nickelodeon and the White House want to show support for U.S. military families with a cameo by the first lady on the show.

On "iCarly," Cosgrove plays Carly Shay, the daughter of an Air Force colonel who is serving overseas.

In an episode titled, "iMeet the First Lady," Carly gets upset when her father's return from active duty is canceled because he is deployed again. Her friends decide to surprise her with a live feed to her father during an iCarly webcast. After Mrs. Obama sees the webcast, she praises Carly for being such a supportive daughter to a father who is serving his country.

Cosgrove said the goal was to "let (military) kids know how important their parents are."

She said that despite being nervous about meeting Mrs. Obama, she found her quite approachable, calling the first lady a "nice, pretty normal person" who even danced with the cast during a regular segment called "Random Dancing."

"It was probably the most fun thing we did. We all just got to let loose and have a good time," Cosgrove said.

The episode of "iCarly" featuring the first lady will air Monday, Jan. 16 on Nickelodeon at 8 p.m. EST.
