New Seasons plans to build store on abandoned block

New Seasons Market announced last week plans to convert a long-vacant lot into their 13th store, which will be located in Portland's Eliot neighborhood in 2013.

The 30,000 square-foot grocery store will occupy the north portion of the now-vacant site, formerly home to Wonder Bread bakery.

The nearly three-acre site is surrounded by North Fremont Street, Vancouver Avenue, Cook Street and Williams Avenue, all within the city's Interstate Corridor Urban Renewal Area.

"New Seasons' proposed new store is great news," said Mayor Sam Adams.

"It will bring fresh local food
