

JOIN US TO WELCOME THE TEAMS HOME.

FREE food & fun for the entire family!

GRAND OPENING of the

Concordia University Hilken Community Stadium
new soccer and baseball complex

Saturday, March 3 | 12:00pm

highlights

Neil Everett, ESPN - emcee

FREE food, fun, and activities for the entire family
Special game memorabilia for the first 100 people to arrive
Enjoy free entrance to a baseball doubleheader
(Concordia vs. Patten University)

2715 N.E. Liberty Street, Portland, OR 97211
RSVP: 503.280.8505 | www.BringTheTeamsHome.com/rsvp

Advocating for Disability Rights

In January, Tyrone Waters was honored by Disability Rights Oregon with a plaque to thank him for his six years of volunteer service on its Board of Directors.

As a Board member, Waters helped guide the non-profit organization and support its mission to promote and defend the rights of individuals with disabilities in Oregon.

Waters is the son of former

Tyrone Waters

Oregon State Sen. Avel Gordly. Like his mother, he is a community advocate and volunteers time promoting the rights of all people with a focus on individuals in the mental health system and the African American community.

Waters has released a CD that tells about his encounters with the Portland police and the Oregon State Hospital as an African-American man.

Advertise with diversity in
The Portland
Observer
Call 503-288-0033
ads@
portlandobserver.com

Marines Honor Black History

The U.S. Marine Corps is honoring the communities Marines proudly call home for Black History Month.

A highlight of the campaign is the "Where I'm From" interactive map, found at marines.com/whereimfrom, where visitors can click on their hometowns and post inspirational messages for the Marines who serve in their community.

Also placed throughout the map are video profiles of Marines reflecting on their hometowns, childhood memories and influential people in their lives. Each Marine shares a unique story of why they chose to join the Marine Corps.

The Marine Corps is also recognizing the contributions and achievements of the first African Americans to be sworn in as United States Marines.

The inspirational stories about these brave individuals can be found by visiting lifeasamarine.com.

Black History Month programming at Reed is developed and cosponsored by the Multicultural Enrichment Committee and the Office for Institutional Diversity.

All events are free and open to the public.
www.reed.edu/bhm/

Segregated waiting room at railroad depot, Jacksonville, Florida, 1921, from State Archives of Florida.

Black History Month 2012 THE AFRICAN DIASPORA: MOVEMENTS, TRADITIONS, AND LEGACIES

JAZZ PERFORMANCE: "Double Legacy Project"
DARRELL GRANT

The internationally recognized jazz pianist and composer with drummer Brian Blade, saxophonist Steve Wilson, and vibraphonist Joe Locke, in an exploration of the legacies we inherit and those we leave behind.
February 11, 8 p.m., Kaul Auditorium

LECTURE: "Race, Racism, and Discrimination in America"
CHARLES J. OGLETREE JR.

Harvard Law School's Jesse Climenko Professor of Law and author of The Presumption of Guilt: The Arrest of Henry Louis Gates Jr. and Race, Class, and Crime in America.
February 18, 7:30 p.m., Vollum lecture hall

LECTURE: "Obama is No King: Reflections on Presidential Politics and the Black Prophet Tradition"
GLENN C. LOURY

Brown University's Merton P. Stoltz Professor of Social Sciences and professor of economics. Cosponsored by the Walter Krause Economics Lectures fund.
February 20, 4:30 p.m., Vollum lecture hall

LECTURE: "The Warmth of Other Suns"
ISABEL WILKERSON

Professor of journalism and director of narrative nonfiction at Boston University and author of The Warmth of Other Suns: The Epic Story of America's Great Migration.
February 25, 7:30 p.m., Kaul Auditorium

Photo by Joe Henson

REED COLLEGE
3203 SE WOODSTOCK BLVD. | EVENTS LINE: 503/777-7755

Cold Shoulder for 7-Eleven

continued from page 3

whole neighborhood doesn't want them here."

Narayan, who has owned her small business for 20-years, said she is certain the new corporate mart will affect their business, especially because the chain will be open 24 hours.

"I don't see the need. There are already six stores in 15 blocks," she said.

Angela Koh, the owner of Killingsworth Street Market, a block away, agreed.

"I don't understand it," she said. "There are too many small grocery stores already."

Like Narayan, Koh said she is also worried about the impact on the hours of operation of her store, which she explained is consistent with the other marts on the street. "We are open from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. every night. Everyone is the same, but 7-Elevens are 24-hours," she said.

The area surrounding the new proposed location was recently rezoned from residential to commercial, and like many residents, Koh said she is worried about the late night activity.

7-Eleven is also looking to build at a corner lot on a commercially zoned lot on North Lombard Street in St. Johns, which local residents have also been publically opposing in the past month.

Officials at Portland's Bureau of Development Services said convenience stores, like 7-Eleven, are required to come up with a plan to make sure they are prepared for issues specific to each neighborhood they are in, but the neighborhood does not have to approve the plan.

Northeast resident Grace Cox, who has worked at the Alberta Street Co-op on 15th and Alberta since November, said her concern lingers around the health of individuals within the community.

"The neighborhood in a broad context is over serviced with convenience type stores, and for the health of the community, if we need anything, we need more fresh food, real food outlets and fewer convenient stores," she said.

She said new 7-Elevens will also hurt the surrounding local independent shop owners in the neighborhood.

Although she said she doesn't consider the co-op to be in the same industry as convenience stores, Cox explained "that any business in its right mind wants to serve the people in its community."