A solo exhibit featuring paintings and mixed media art by Portland artist Sue Lau opens Friday at the Architectural Heritage Center, 701 S.E. Grand Ave.

Baby Boomer Nostalgia Art

The Architectural Heritage Center hosts "Nostalgia Up Close", a solo exhibit of work by Portland artist, Sue Lau.

The free exhibit will showcase Lau's hand-painted paper dress collages and multi-media paintings of objects Baby Boomers grew up with such as Converse shoes, transistor radios, VW vans, vintage kitchen tools and Catholic school uniforms.

The work will be on display in the center's gallery at 701 S.E. Grand Ave., starting with an opening reception on Friday, April 6, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., and continuing until May 1.

Lau's works most often with acrylic and mixed media, though often she expands into ink, colored pencil and watercolor. Sue began her study of art with an interior design degree. As her children grew and her inner artist transitioned, she made a career change and has been an art instructor and visiting artist in many Portland area schools.

"Children have taught me about art," she said. "They have influenced my style with their sense of humor and broad use of color. When I paint I have a strong concept, but ultimately the outcome is like hanging on to the leash of a big rambunctious dog on an unexplored trail. The end result is always a bit of a surprise."

During her exhibit, Lau will be conducting a hands-on art program for kids at the Architectural Heritage Center.
