Event to pack college gym with resources

The Cascade Campus Job Fair, one of the foremost resources for job seekers in the Portland metro area, makes its annual return on Tuesday, April 24. An assortment of area employers will be on hand at the event – the 15th annual Job Fair – set for 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Cascade Campus Gym, 705 N. Killingsworth St.

“We’re so excited to have a free seminar this year by the author of Social Media Job Search for Dummies,” said Cascade Career Services Director Becky Washington, coordinator of the Job Fair. “Looking for work has certainly changed in

Activist in Race for Metro Seat

A community organizer and former chief of staff to City Commissioner Nick Fish is heralding his experience in government and grass-roots activism to bring better outcomes in housing, jobs and the environment.

Sam Chase is running for a seat on the Metro Council, a regional government jurisdiction. He would represent parts of north, northeast and northwest Portland if elected to the District 5 seat in the May Primary Election.

Sam Chase

Chase has worked as the executive director of the Oregon Opportunity Network to help create affordable housing and economic opportunity for working families, seniors and people with disability.

As the former executive director of the Coalition of Community Health Clinics, he said he helped provide healthcare for more than 50,000 uninsured or under-insured people in our com-
