Seniors Showcase Talents

A group of seniors and their caregivers sang and dance their day away at the Emeritus Sellwood Landing long-care health facility in southeast Portland, competing in a national contest to find America's most talented seniors.

The recent event was part of the non-profit 3in4 Need More's 50-city bus tour to raise awareness about the high price of long-term health care, and how seniors and their families can plan ahead to help mitigate the potential costs.

Spokesperson and author Dr. Marion Somers is traveling across the country in a converted Greyhound bus to share tips and emcee the talent auditions. The visit included a stop at Voodoo Doughnuts, which created special donuts for the Portland contest.

For more information and resources, including a calculator to tally long-term care costs, visit 3in4NeedMore.com.
