'The Show Must Go On' Documents Hollywood Turmoil

Goes behind the scenes after Whitney's death

(AP) — When Grammy Awards producers learned of Whitney Houston's death less than 24 hours before the live telecast, they scrapped parts of the script, added performances and puzzled over how best to honor the Grammy-winning singer who died unexpectedly at age 48.

Host LL Cool J said that addressing the Grammy audience at the Staples Center after Houston's death was "definitely the most challenging moment I've faced in my career."

He decided to open with a prayer, and producers agreed, though none could recall another network TV event that began as such.

This and other last-minute changes made to the 54th annual Grammy Awards are chronicled in a new documentary, "A Death in the Family: The Show Must Go On," which premiered last week at the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

The 25-minute documentary, though it deals with show changes made after Houston's death, isn't a downer.

After Houston died, the challenge was to "do something that was respectful to Whitney," said Ken Ehrlich, executive producer of the Grammys for the past 23 years. "That set a tone that also didn't lose the fact that there were thousands of people who were coming to this event because they had done something remarkable this year on their own, and they needed to be treated with respect as well."

The documentary includes interviews with LL Cool J and Jennifer Hudson, who performed a heartfelt tribute to Houston.

February's Grammy Awards drew nearly 40 million viewers, its second largest audience ever. The biggest Grammy audience — more than 43 million viewers — came in 1984, when Michael Jackson won a record eight awards for "Thriller."

THE SPINA COLUMN™

An ongoing series of questions and answers about America's natural healing profession.

Part 6. HEADACHES: Why Chiropractic is nature's long-lasting pain reliever.

Q: I always seem to be plagued with headaches. They come up over my head and seem to stop at my eye. What can Chiropractic possibly do to help me?

A: About 70% of all people experience headaches of one sort or another. The type you describe is quite typical. The pain can range anywhere from moderate to nauseating. The top three nerves in the neck go up over the back of the skull in a very similar pattern to what you describe. Any type of pressure or irritation on these nerves can cause extreme pain. Your problems could be nerve-related and therefore, stand a very good chance of being relieved by Chiropractic.

Q: Why should I go through a full course of Chiropractic when drugs often relieve my headaches?

A: Drugs work primarily on relieving pain, but not on treating the cause of the headache.

What's more, drugs have serious side effects. The only side effects of Chiropractic are relief from pain and a healing of the cause of pain. To find out how Chiropractic could help relieve your headaches or for answers to any questions you might have about your health, please call us at the telephone number listed directly below.
