Nephew Named Co-Guardian

(AP) — A judge appointed Michael Jackson's nephew last week to share guardianship responsibilities for the singer's three children.

TJ Jackson will now share responsibilities for raising the siblings, who range in ages from 10 to 15.

The judge made the ruling after considering a letter submitted by singer Diana Ross, who was named in Michael Jackson's will as a potential guardian, and a letter presented by cousins of the singer who sought a delay in the appointment, saying they were concerned that family matriarch Katherine Jackson was being coerced.

The judge, however, noted that all three children have said they consent to the co-guardianship, and that an independent investigation he ordered showed they "have a very strong, loving relationship with TJ Jackson."

The appointment means that Katherine Jackson, 82, and TJ Jackson, 34, will share responsibilities for raising the children. If one of them is no longer able to serve, the other would become the children's sole guardian.
