Performing Arts Center hosts 25th anniversary party

Portland Center for the Performing Arts is celebrating its 25th year with a free, family-oriented celebration on Sunday, Sept. 16, from noon to 5 p.m.

"We've enjoyed two and a half decades as the convener of arts events in the Portland metropolitan area and we invite the public to join us in celebrating our silver anniversary," said Robyn Williams, PCPA executive director.

The afternoon will include hourly live performances by groups such as Portland Taiko and Portland Opera, craft activities for kids, artisan booths, face painting, scavenger hunts, and behind-the-scenes theater tours.

PCPA was established in 1987 when Antoinette Hatfield Hall, formerly called the New Theatre Building, opened as the result of a grassroots effort to create an arts and culture district in downtown Portland.

The former Paramount Theatre had been recently restored to its original glory as the Arlene Schnitzer Concert Hall, inspiring the region's arts advocates to create a campus of world-class performing arts venues. Keller Auditorium, originally constructed as Civic Auditorium, was included as well.

Through a mix of operating revenues, commercial rental rates, ticket user fees, transient lodging taxes and general fund support from the City of Portland and Metro, the PCPA has achieved its original mission to support

Portland's non-profit arts organizations in reaching diverse audiences across the region and state.

Today, 21 arts organizations call the PCPA home, including Oregon Ballet Theatre, Oregon Symphony Orchestra, Portland Opera, Tears of Joy Theatre, Oregon Children's Theatre, and Portland Youth Philharmonic.
