Portland Parks & Recreation plans to plant 20,000 crocus bulbs in the grass of Chapman and Lownsdale Squares, downtown, on Tuesday, Oct. 16 with the help of volunteers.

Volunteers to Plant Crocuses

Portland Parks & Recreation will continue a tradition of volunteer engagement and stewardship by planting 20,000 crocus bulbs in the grass of Chapman and Lownsdale Squares.

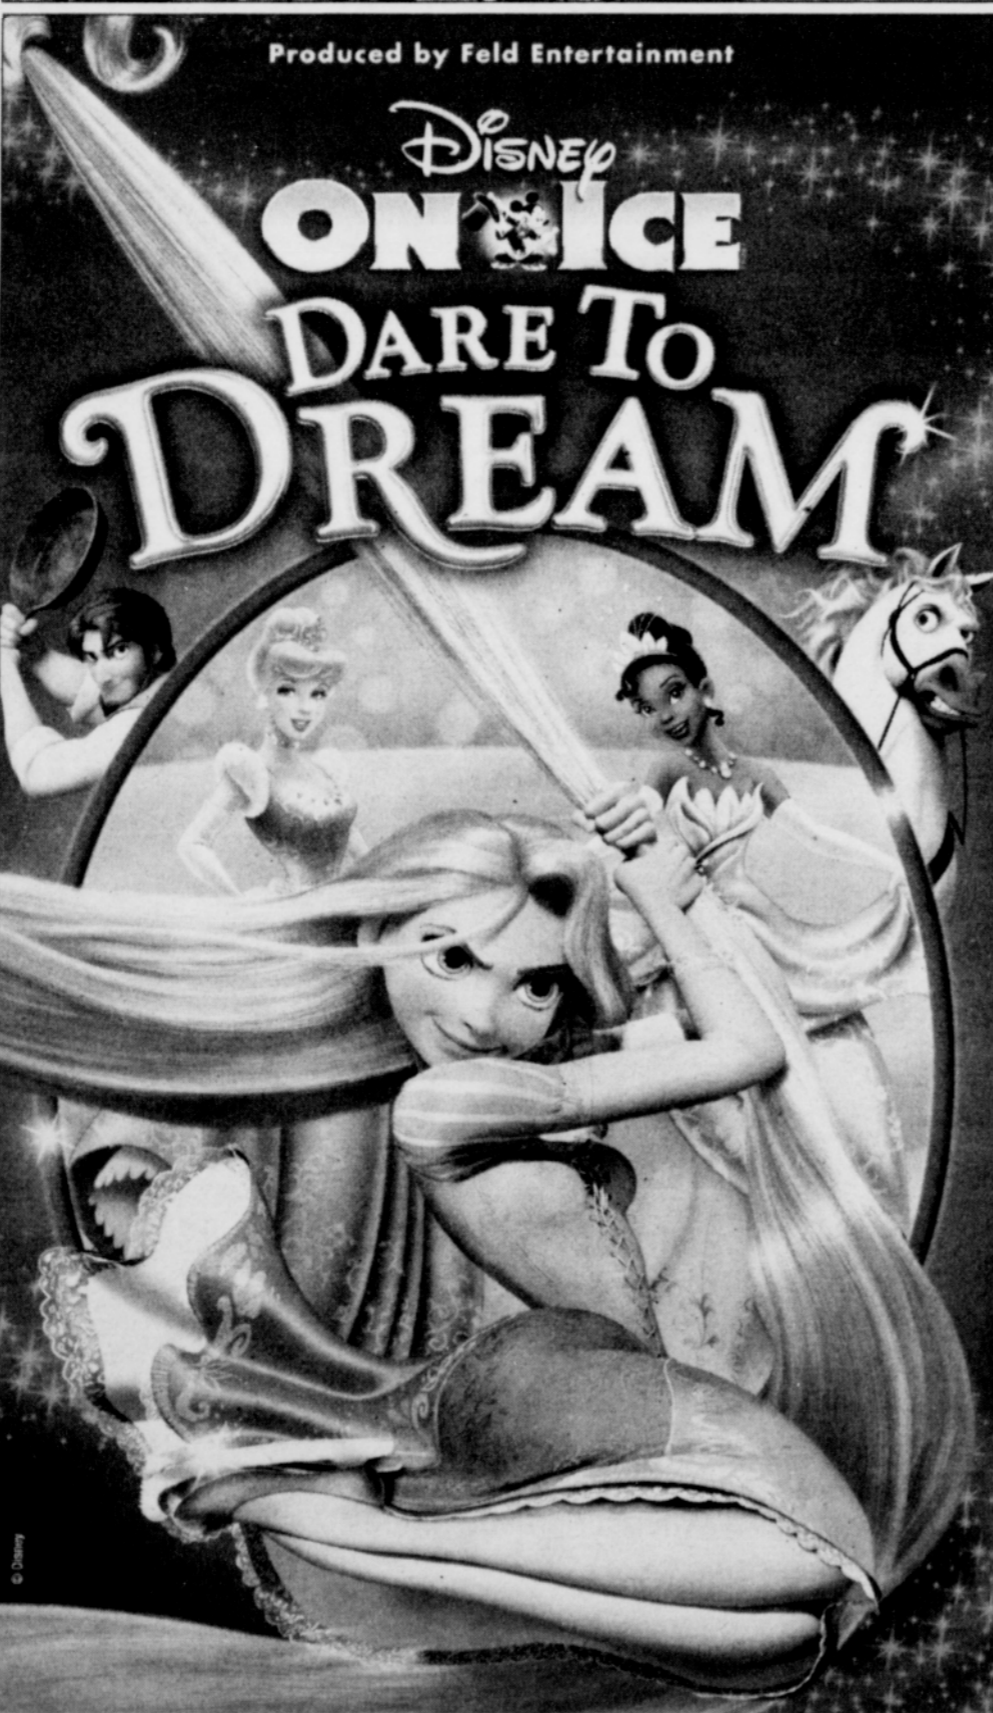

The planting will take place on Tuesday, Oct. 16, beginning at 8:30 a.m. The bulbs are wanted to further beautify the two downtown parks, especially during the rainy early spring when crocus flowers offer a bright, colorful bloom. Later in the spring the lush grass will return.

Chapman and Lownsdale Squares were the first two parks in the PP&R system, just northwest of City Hall.

"It's a pretty eye-popping number - 20,000," says PP&R horticulturalist Lance Wright. "We are excited about our valued volunteers and anticipate a tremendous outcome as a result of their efforts!"

Mimosa Studios Hosts Benefit

Mimosa Studios, a "paint your own pottery" ceramic studio at 1718 N.E. Alberta St., is celebrating 11 years on Alberta this month by hosting a student art show, and holding a fundraiser for the De Paul Youth & Family Center.

"Our eleven years in business on Alberta corresponds with my own sobriety date," says artist and owner Austin Raglione. "It is important to me as a business owner and community partner to help support families in need."

Raglione serves on the board of directors for De Paul Treatment Centers and is a program manager for the Portland Police Bureau's Service Coordination Team which provides drug treatment for chronic offenders.

Mimosa Studios will be donating 10 percent of its gross receipts for the month of October directly to the De Paul Youth & Family Center. Additionally, a show of student art will kick off with a student reception on Friday, Oct. 12 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. The works will be displayed through Nov. 2.
