Part 26 KIDS AND CHIROPRACTIC As the twig is bent so grows the tree

Q: I have recently noticed my son has one shoulder higher than the other. Could this be a sign of a problem in his spine?
A: Good thinking, mom! It surely could. In fact having one shoulder higher than the other is a cardinal sign of curvature of the spine. According to Chiropractic research, the earlier a curvature is caught, the higher the potential for success. To be certain about health of your child, call our office today for a professional spinal evaluation. Spines (big or small) are our specialty.

Q: I have been told that my child needs an operation for a curvature in her spine. Is there an alternative?
A: You most definitely should have a thorough Chiropractic checkup on your child immediately. Spinal surgery gets. All conservative efforts at handling your child's problem should be considered before consenting to surgery. Our office is highly trained and skilled at handling problems like that of your child's. Don't be fooled by the thought of "watching the condition" either. Without proper assistance it won't go away. Offer your children the best in health care. Give them regular Chiropractic checkups. As the twig is bent so grows the tree!

Clark College Serves Veterans

For the third consecutive year, Clark College in Vancouver has been named a military friendly school for its service of more than 700 veterans annually. The honor shows Clark College's commitment to providing a supportive environment for military students, said Sean Collins, director for G.I. Jobs. Many Clark College faculty and staff, including President Robert K. Knight have served in the military. The nomination also reflects the school's support with veterans' organizations, including the Veterans Administration hospital across the street from the main campus. "We owe so much to the men and women who serve in our military and to their families. They have served us with distinction," said Knight, "It's our privilege to serve them." Veterans Affairs Program Specialist Mike Gibson said veterans return to civilian life with a wide range of valuable technical and leadership skills. "We are committed to supporting them as they transition back to civilian life and become a valued part of our workforce and our community," Gibson said.
